THE death of the late learned and ingenious Mr. WARTON happening in the very moment of this Publication, the Editor hopes he shall not be accused of presumption in embracing the opportunity of acknowledging the honour of his friendship. By Mr. WARTON's judgement of the work he was first induced to undertake it, by his friendly opinions encouraged in the prosecution of it, and by his kind admonitions assisted in its completion. He leaves it to abler hands to describe those various merits, the loss of which are powerfully felt and expressed in the affectionate regrets and respect of his friends and the public. To his Friends he was endeared by his simple, open, and friendly manners; to this University by a long residence and many services; and to the Public by the valuable additions, which have been made by his talents to English Poetry, Antiquities, and Criticism.*

Of the CHANCELLORS, COMMISSARIES, PROCHANCELLORS, or VICECHANCELLORS, and PROCTORS.

NOTWITHSTANDING the Cantabrigians (1) have been ſo bold as to derive their Catalogue of Chancellors from Amphibalus the Martyr, who, as they ſay, was the firſt Rector of the Scholars of Cambridge City, An. Dom. 289, and from others who interruptedly ſucceeded, viz. Mauritius in the time of Conſtantine the Great, An. Dom. 310, Kynotus in the time of K. Arthur, an. 517, Edbertus in the reign of Cedwall, an. 678, Almericus in the reign of Cadwallader, an. 690, &c. and I know not whom, (all received upon uncertain truſt by the firſt author of thoſe matters, Nich. de Cantilupo, who died An. Dom. 1441) yet I ſhall not preſume to do as they have done, but inſert only thoſe that I find from record, not in the leaſt to be doubted by many.

To paſs by therefore St. GERMAN, St. GILDAS, MELKINUS, NENNIUS, KENTIGERNUS, and others, who lived in the times of the Britains and Saxons, reported by a very good Exemplar (as Camden ſaith) of Aſſerius Menevenſis (2) to have ſtudied in Oxford, and there to have made good

Orders

Orders and Statutes for the Academians, which they would not, nor could have done, unless probably they were the supreme Rectors or Governors of the Scholars there, I shall begin with St. GRYMBALD, whom few or none there be, that will or can deny, but that he was Rector or Governor of the Schools of Oxford, and the Scholars thereof, and from him descend to others, as I find them mentioned in record. But before I begin, I think it fit to acquaint the reader with some things which may perhaps be necessary to be known by him before he enters upon the following Comment, and those are ;

I. That the CHANCELLORS have anciently been written and stiled Rectors and Masters of the Schools, and Rectors and Masters of the Scholars, as may be farther seen in this Comment, an. 1211, 1294, &c.

II. That their place and office hath been derived, so far as concerns their confirmation, from the Diocesan, the Bishop of Lincoln, and their nomination and election by the Regents and Non Regents of the University, continuing so till towards the latter end of Edw. III; and then they were always after elected and confirmed by the said Regents and Non Regents only.

III. That their confirmation by the Diocesan, and election by the Academians, was sometime every year, and for the most part every two. The like also was it, when both election and confirmation came into the hands of the said Academians, which continued till the office of Chancellor became perpetual and for term of life.

IV. That the said office in ancient time was only borne by such that were resident in the University, as by Masters and Doctors of Hostles or Halls and Colleges, Monks, Fryers, &c. afterwards by Bishops, and at length sometimes by persons of the laity, of whom Sir JOHN MASON was the first.

V. That ample privileges have been granted to them by popes, kings, and bishops, as I have told you several times in this work, whereby their authority became great, and their persons much respected and honoured.

VI. That for their help in administering justice, and doing ordinary and common things belonging to their office, they have had Deputies allowed them (sometimes more and at other times fewer) called anciently Vice-gerents and sometimes Commissaries, by which last name I find them mentioned (1) in the 1st and 2nd of Edw. III. Afterwards they were altogether called so, but now and for many years since, Vice chancellors, and that too when the Chancellors have been residing in the University.

VII. That for the more honour of the office, have servants been allowed to wait upon those that bear it, within the precincts of the University, and to usher them in all public assemblies, such I mean that we call Beadles, each of them (in number six, besides a Vergerer) carrying a silver staff erected in their hand, which office is very ancient, and beyond record, mention being made of them (how many at one time I find not) in the reign of Henry III, and before.

(1) [In TURRI Schol. Oxon.] In LIB. PRIVILEG. OXON. per Harum, MS. Fol. 51. f. b.

VIII. That in the vacancy of the Chancellorship, the Senior Theologus, called Cancellarius Natus, then resident in the University, did anciently exercise all jurisdiction within the precincts thereof, otherwise belonging to the office of Chancellor, by giving oaths, keeping the Court, setting the seal to public instruments, presiding in the election of succeeding Chancellors, appearing in suits commenced against the University, proving of wills, and granting administration of the goods of privileged persons, which continued till the reign of Edw. VI, at which time the office of Senior Theologus began to decline.

As for the PROCTORS (whose office is as ancient for aught that I know as that of the Chancellor) are men of great power and rule in the University, especially as to those who have not obtained the title of Master. Their election hath been anciently from the number of senior Masters, not by the Bishop of Lincoln, but by the Regents and non-Regents in Congregation, who also, with the Chancellor, confirmed and admitted them. And as they were taken from the said seniors, so also was there great care had that one should be a Northern and the other a Southern man, because of the constant discord between those parties, and especially that partiality against either party (if both Proctors should be of one party) should be avoided.

The matters that these officers were anciently to look after, and see that they were thoroughly executed, were these (as in our ancient books⁽¹⁾ it appears) viz. to proceed and [exercise] their authority :

But in these things their power did not, nor doth, rest only; but in other matters, as in keeping the peace of the City, in having authority over and correcting the people of the Laity, if they are found guilty of stubbornness, irreverence, sauciness to them, of unseasonable tipling in public houses, and such like: of which matters, and other power that they have (though lessened by the new Statutes) being too tedious now to recite, I shall proceed in my work. In the beginning of which, though I am but slenderly accommodated with the names of Chancellors, Commissaries, and Proctors, such is the defect of our Records, yet the candid Reader I hope, (especially those versed in Histories and Antiquities) will excuse me, and not be apt to impute the fault on me, but time, the devourer of all things.

An. Dom. 883, or thereabouts, St. GRYMBALD occurs Rector or Chancellor of the University of Oxford, after it had been restored by K. Alfred, as is elsewhere shewed.

Vicegerent or Commissary, or Deputy, or by what name soever he was called at this time,

Proctors {
 Mr. {

The names of which officers (for whom these places are left) appearing not for this year, neither for divers following, I shall spare their room till I find them occur.

An. Dom. 889. Chancellor BEATEGRAVIUS, if any faith or trust might be given to the Black Book (1) of Cambridge; for among certain observations that he hath of K. Alfred, I find this—'Videns ergo &c.' 'He seeing therefore that the Scholars, which he brought to Oxford, continually studied in the composition of the Laws, and exposition of the holy Scripture, appointed them for their Rector Grymbald, Rector and Chancellor of the City of Cambridge, who being burnd with old age, permitted him to cease from his office, an. 889, and in his place the noble Beategravius was made by the good will of the Scholars, Rector and Chancellor of Oxford.'—But let the truth of this remain with the Author, for if we consider that the Laws were not in being in K. Alfred's time, nor many years after, as may be seen in the Annals or History, an. 1149, and that also Grymbald was not Bishop of

(1) Script. per Nich. de Cantilupo circa an. 1440. MS.

Winchester, which he confidently reports (2) in the said Black book, there is no credit at all to be given to his observations.

These two ancient Chancellors of the University being thus produced, and said to be before, it remains that we should enquire of their successors after, the Norman Conquest, whether they are known by the names or titles of Rectors, or Chancellors, or Masters of the Schools, or any other name whether general or peculiar, and transmit their almost obliterate memories to Posterity. For which end therefore I shall do my endeavour by beating of obscure paths to obtain my desire, and give a succeeding series (though sometimes imperfect) of our Fasti.

1122, or thereabouts, Chancellor or Rector of the Schools ROBERTUS CANUTUS, as in the History this year; which office of Rector being no other, as I suppose, than Chancellor, I shall here set him down as the first Rector of Oxford, or of the Schools of exercise there, after the coming in of the Normans. He by the Name of Robertus Cricklensis, Prior of the Monastery of St. Frideswyde in Oxford, did about this time (2) give to the Abbey of St. Mary of Cirencester, in which he before had taken upon him the habit of a Canon Regular, his land in Cricklade.

1134, or thereabouts, Chanc. ROBERT PULLEYN as it seems. See in the History this year.

1150, or thereabouts, a Chancellor occurs under that title only, without a name, as it appears from the Chirograph (3) of one Robert Foliot, Rector of the Moyety of the Church of Rowlesham or Rouseham in Oxfordshire; wherein 'tis said, that the Chancellor of Oxford, with the Prior and Dean of Abendon, were delegated by the Pope to be judges of a controversy concerning part of the tithes of the said town, &c. Now in what time the said R. Foliot lived, appears plainly from another Chirograph (4) which speaks to this effect:

'Be it known to all &c. that I Robert Foliot give to Osney that land of my fee which lieth in the great street in the borough of Oxford, in St. Michael's parish at Northgate, held of me by Austen, priest, &c. in knowledge of which gift Wygot the Prior gave to me half an ounce of gold, and to my wife one mark, &c.' which Wygot being made Prior of Osney, an. 1138, and continuing in that office till 1168, (in which time Osney from a Priory was made an Abbey) plainly shews the time of the said Foliot. See this matter more at large in the Latin Copy.

1201. Chancellor under a general name, as appears by this obligation or Bond (5)——'Sciant universi per presentes nos Cancellarium Universitatis Oxonie cum toto cetu Magistrorum ejusdem, teneri et per presens scriptum firmiter obligari, Priori et Conventui S. Frideswide Oxonie et eorum Successoribus in ducentis libris monete Anglicane, &c. Dat. Oxonie in domo nostre congregationis in Festo S. Jacobi Apostoli An. Dom. 1201.' Though the name of the said Chancellor occurs not in this Writing, nor in that an. 1150, yet the succession in the office is proved.

1211. Chancellor or Rector of the Schools MASTER ALARDUS, in the same sense with ROBERT CANUTUS: the reason of which I have told you in my History an. 1294. As for this ALARDUS I find mention of him to this effect in an ancient writing (1) which I english thus: — 'Know ye as R. Prior of Osney, and H. Dean of Oxford saith, that the controversy which is between Hugh the Lord Abbot and Convent of Abendon on the one part, and Master Eustachius, Rector of the Church of Cesterton (2) on the other, concerning certain tithes issuing from the 40 acres which are situated in Bruerio de Cesterton, (3) which Jeffry St. Maure holdeth of the fee of William de Lega senior, in Cesterton, was by the authority of Pope Innocent III, controverted in our presence (Mr. Alardus Rector of the Schools, our brother judge in this matter, sufficiently excusing himself by his letters) and brought to a final concord after this manner, &c.' At the end of the said writing it is thus said, 'This composition was made before us in the Church of St. Mary in Oxford, on the morrow after the invention of the holy cross, in the 13th year of the Pontificate of Innocent III, that is, An. Dom. 1211.' Which, that it may be the better understood, it must be supposed, that the said Pope ordained upon this question of tithes three judges in England, namely, Mr. Alardus, Chancellor of the University, R. Prior of Osney, and H. Dean of Oxenford; but Alardus for fear of the Bishop of Lincoln, his Diocesan, (then Hugh Wallys, who was too severe and rigid toward the Academians) by whom perhaps he was no otherwise admitted to his office than by the name of Master of the Schools (though saluted in the Pope's bull the Rector) refusing to appear in the said cause, and therefore excused himself by his letters, the decision of the whole matter was left to the said two judges. And this I suppose was the true and likely cause of the excuse, as from that which I have elsewhere delivered appears. To these matters I shall add, that Robert Grosstest who succeeded the said H. Wallys in the see of Lyncoln, wrote one or two (4) Epistles to Brother Alardus Provincial Prior of the preaching Fryars in England, and that also about the same time Mr. Alardus, Subdean of Wells, (5) conveyed certain land in the parish of St. Mildrid in Oxford (in which parish he sometime living, or perhaps was born, was surnamed thence, as I elsewhere (6) find) to Thomas the son of Wydo, but whether either of these two were the same with this our Alardus, Rector of the Schools, I cannot safely determine.

1214. Chancellor under a general name, mentioned in the bull (1) of Nicholas, Bishop of Frascati; concerning the punishment inflicted on the Burghers of Oxford for hanging of certain clerks, &c. dat. 7 cal. Jul. this year. The originals of which transactions are, with their autographs, kept to this day in our Archives, and in certain Registers or statute books of the University, not only as a memory of that horrid fact, but to be made use of and taken out as occasion serves. Among them is the first composition (that I have yet seen) made between the Scholars and Burghers, esteemed a monument of so great an account by our predecessors that they decreed the original of it to be kept in the Treasury of Lincoln Church, as the only κειμήλιον of the University. [See before in the Annals under this year.]

1220. Chancellor, Mr. LEWES de CHAPIRNAY, D. of D. if any truth may be given to that instrument of dotation of the Scholars of Mr. William of Durham, mentioned before in University College.

1221. Chancellor under a general name, as from a papal bull (and the process that thereupon followed) which partly runs under this form, appears. (2) 'Honorius Episcopus, servus servorum Dei, dilectis filiis Archidiacono Wigorn. et Cancellario et Decano Oxon. Lincoln. Dioces. Salutem et Apostolicam benedictionem. Ex parte Abbatis et Conventus de Osney, &c.' The Bull was for the designing of the said persons therein mentioned, to be judges for the examination of certain witnesses concerning the tithes belonging to the monastery of Osney: 'dat. Lateran. 3 cal. Apr. an. pontif. 5.' There is also another ancient writing (3) depending on it, wherein the said Bull is by way of inspeximus word for word recited, and what also the said three judges acted in the cause, and what witnesses they examined, and such like, under their seals, all done in St. Mary's Church in Oxford, on the morrow after the octaves of the Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, an. 1221: which is the fifth year of P. Honorius III. Two other instances of the same kind, dated also at the same time, I could produce (4) to prove this Chancellor under a general name, to have undergone that office this year, but because I aim as much as I can at brevity, I shall omit them. However, what is here and before said, doth make much as well for the antiquity as dignity of the chief Magistrate of the University, that he should be thus designed a judge by the Pope in causes of so great weight. Now if any think that the Chancellor here mentioned was not of the University but of the Bishop of Lincoln, he or they do greatly err, for there never was any such person of this place different from the Academical Chancellor, that had jurisdiction here. Neither do I find among the Muniments of the University any mention of the Chancellor that had belonged to the Diocesan of Lincoln, at least in that sense which used to be said of William de Monte, an ancient Chancellor of Lincoln, thus (1):

‘Incipit hic nostri pulchrum numerale Magistri
Et Cancellarii Nicol (2) de monte Gulelmi.’

I now come to two eminent and famous Scholars of this University (almost coetaneous) who from good right ought to obtain a place here, although when they bore the fasces of this supreme magistracy with us, I have as yet no certainty. One of them was St. EDMUND, surnamed le RICHE, whom Matthew Parys (3) styles ‘Prælector in Theologia Oxoniali.’ But whether he did undergo the office of Chancellor before or after the obtaining his Lectureship it doth not appear, or that he was Chancellor an. 1234, in which year he was declared Archbishop of Canterbury (as in a certain old Catalogue of Chancellors is delivered) I scarce think it credible. The other is ROBERT GROSSTEST, whom, though I find not in any ancient Catalogue of our Chancellors to occur, yet that he bore the office under that, or the title of Master of the Schools, I have manifestly proved in my History, an. 1294. He became Bishop of Lincoln 1235, and was second to none of his predecessors or successors either for learning or piety.

1230. Chanc. under a general name.

Commissary or Vicegerent ELYAS de DANEIS.

The said nameless Chancellor occurs in the Bull (4) of P. Gregory IX, directed to him the said Chancellor, the Abbot of Evesham, and Dean of Oxford, for the decision of certain controversies, concerning tithes between W. the parson of Wdeton or Wood-Eaton in com. Oxon. and the Abbot and Convent of Malmesbury, dated at Perugia 4 cal. an. Pontif. 3. The Vicegerent occurs in the decision (5) itself, for the Chancellor being absent, or else waving that employment, it was performed by him and the Dean of Oxford, the principal judge of the matter, in All Saints Church, Oxon, on the Vigils of St. Peter and St. Paul, an. 1230.

1231. Chancellor, Mr. RALPH, Archdeacon of Chester, as in a certain rescript of K. Hen. III, in the Memorables of Rob. Hare, (6) dat. Jun. 23, an. reg. 15. But the said Hare, who hath written the Catalogues (7) of the Chancellors of both the Universities, doth, for the respect to his Mother the University of Cambridge, insert St. Amphibalus as the first Chancellor or Rector thereof an. Dom. 289, with others following to the Norman Conquest, from the authority of the Black book, and such like frivolous stuff.

But

But the Oxonian Epoch of Chancellors he begins with this Mr. Ralph, with no memory had of those either before, or after the Norman Conquest, to his time. Whether he places him as the first in time, which he found among the records in the Tower of London, and no otherwise, I know not. However that he, and others of his opinion (if any such) are deceived, in placing, and supposing this Mr. Ralph to be the first Chancellor of Oxford, shall appear from that which follows. When the Bishop of Lincoln did argue with this Chancellor (or at least his successor Ralph de Semplyngham) concerning the use of the seal, (whether public or private I know not) and thereupon a troublesome question arose between him and the University, Adam de Marisco wrote an Epistle (1) to the Bishop about it. In which, among other things, he pleased to take notice of these words following—‘Signo illo quod dicitur Universitatis Oxon, quo in simplicitate sua sicut et plures antecessorum suorum, usus est, de cætero si jusseritis nequaquam usurus et adnutum beneplaciti vestri, suo cedet officio, &c.’ Thus Marisco; but by the sequence of the words, it appears, he contends not about the matter. It seems it hath not been doubtful to any Oxonian and (I believe) others, but that several predecessors of this Chancellor used seals, and to me it plainly appears, that he neither innovated any thing in his seal, or used another or the form of another, but only that which his Antecessors in the same office used. And yet notwithstanding from this Chancellor, as from the first of all, the said Hare did begin his Catalogue of them for the University of Oxford. This year also a Chancellor under a general name occurs in a certain script (2) dat. on the Vigils of S. Bartholomew the Apostle, whereby he, the Archdeacon of Worcester, and Dean of Oxford, were deputed judges concerning the composing of a difference between Osney and E. Rector of Horspath near Oxford concerning the lesser tithes thereof, &c.

1233, or thereabouts, Chancellor Mr. RALPH COLE, the same perhaps with Mr. Ralph, Archdeacon of Chester in the year 1231. The mention that I find of him is only as a Witness to a certain Charter (3) whereby Sir Vivian de Bray, or the son of Ralph, gave to Osney his land joining on the west side of the church-yard of St. Peter in the East; which land did sometime belong to John of Oxford, Bishop of Norwich. The names of the witnesses that follow after the said Charter are Peter the son of Thorald, Mayor of Oxford, Rob. Oein, Philip le Mulner, Stephen the Son of Henry the son of Simeon, Henry his brother, Master Maurice, Master Richard of Cornwall, Robertus Mercator, Laur. Halegod, Thomas Submuro, Laurence Wiard, and Mace, Provosts of Oxford.

1234. Chancellor the said Mr. RALPH COLE, mentioned in another Charter (4) dated this year on the Monday after Palm Sunday, whereby the said

Sir Vivian, or the Son of Ralph, doth free the Canons of Osney from being troubled by the enjoyment of the said tenement in the parish of St. Peter in the East.

1238. Chanc. Frater SIMON de BOVILL, Prior of the preaching Fryers in Oxford, who in the 22 of Hen. III, which is this year, was present (1) at the Submission of the Scholars for the outrage committed on Otho, the Pope's Legate, at Osney.

1239. Chanc. Mr. JOHN de RIGATER, as from that Charter mentioned before in University College Schools, appears. Which Charter being dated 3 cal. Nov. this year, the said Rigater, with Jeffry de Stocwell Mayor, John Sewy and Hugh Hardyng, Provosts of Oxford, were Witnesses.

1240. Chanc. Mr. RALPH de HEYHAM, Chancellor of Salisbury, as it appears in a writing of 25 H. III, mentioned (2) to be under the seal of him the said Heyham, as Chancellor of the University.

1241. Chanc. the same, RALPH de HEYHAM, as it seems.

1242, or thereabouts, RICH. de la WYKE or WYCHE, P. of D. and Canon Law, as by some it is reported. (3) He was afterwards Bishop of Chester, and canonized by the Pope for a Saint.

1244. Chanc. SIMON de BOVILL again, as in a composition (4) between the K. and the University, concerning the Chancellor's cognizance of Pleas in contracts of moveable things. To which are the seals of the said Simon, Thomas, Archdeacon of Lincoln, John, Archdeacon of Cornwall, and Fryer John de Bacun. After him I find several Chancellors under general names, which I shall now omit, and proceed to those that are under their own.

1246. Chanc. Mr. GILBERT de BIHAM, as appears by this writing: 'Omnibus ad quos, &c.' 'To all whom this writing (5) may concern, &c. Mr. Gilb. de Biham, Chancellor of Oxford, sendeth greeting in the Lord: Know ye, that I, in the year of Grace, 1246, at the Feast of St. Nicholas, have received of the Canons of Osney two marks from the church of Fulnell, to be distributed among the poor Scholars of Oxford, according to the Ordination of Robert, Lord Bishop of Lyncoln, &c.' This Mr. Biham was Chantor and Canon of Wells, (6) and living in a tenement in the parish of St. John Bapt. Oxon. opposite to the Church thereof, was from him called Biham Hall, afterwards corruptly Beame, and Boheme Hall.

whether it be the same Ralph, that we have put down for Chancellor, I know not.

1253. Chanc. Mr. RALPH de SEMPRINGHAM, as from part of certain annals (1) going thus is testified. 'Anno MCCLIII, &c.' 'In the year 1253, on the seventh of the Ides of Febr. died William de Manchester, Archdeacon of Lichfield, to whom succeeded Ralph de Sempryngham, Theologift, Chancellor of Oxon.' And in another place I find mention of the said person thus — 'Eodem anno, &c.' 'In the same year (1254) in the month of Febr. Mr. Ralph de Sempryngham was elected Dean of Lichfield church by the Canons thereof, and afterwards confirmed by the Lord Roger de Weseham, Bishop of Lichfield.' He died 1260; about which time he founded the Chantry of St. Andrew, in the Cathedral Church of Lichfield, valued yearly to be worth 5l. In the Epistles (2) of Robert Grosstest, I find one written, before he was made Bishop of Lincoln, to Fryer Agnell, the Minister of the Minorities of Oxford, and to R. Archdeacon of Leicester; which R. whether he be the same with this Ralph I know not.

1255. Chanc. Mr. WILLIAM de LODELAWHE, as in a certain Charter, (3) whereby Gilbert the Abbot and Convent of Einsam, did grant to the Prior of Schyreburne, in the Diocese of Winchester, all their right in an house in St. Peter's parish in the East in Oxford, which was belonging sometime to Mr. William de Drochedathe, &c. The Charter is dated this year, on the tuesday after Quali modo geniti, and witnessed, besides this Chancellor, by Mr. Giles de Brudeport, Archdeacon of Berkshire, Adam Feteplace, Mayor of Oxford, and others.

1256, or thereabouts, Chanc. Mr. RICHARD de SANCTA AGATHA, of whom I find mention in an Epistle to him, (4) written by Fryer Adam de Marisco; wherein the said Adam desireth him to promote the petition of Mr. Simon de Valencinis or Valentiis, Canon of Lincoln, to borrow 40l. of the money of Mr. William of Durham, kept in the hands of the Chancellor, Proctors and Masters. And 'tis probable, that he being thus courted by Marisco, might about this time either bear the Office of Chancellor or Commissary. One Mr. Robert de S. Agatha I find witness (5) about this time to divers evidences, his name being in the first place, and set before that of the Mayor of Oxford. Whether he was Chancellor I know not; sure I am that he was Archdeacon of Durham, and, if I am not mistaken, succeeded Mr. William, an. 1249.

1263. Chanc. the same THOMAS de CANTELUPD, as it seems, who about this time was (as 'tis reported) Doctor of the Canon Law. In the year 1265 he was made Lord Chancellor of England; but that office he held but a short time. Afterwards he retired to Oxon, and lived there several years. Of this Chancellor you may be pleased to read these things following from a certain author. (1)—'Unde ad Universitatem Oxonie primo, postmodum Parisiis se transferens, rationalem scientiam aggreditur, et philosophie secreta rimatur, Magistralem Cathedram ascendens. Oxoniam demum rediens, Juris Canonici Doctor et Cancellarius Universitatis efficitur: in quo quidem officio in causarum discussionibus prudens investigator extitit, in judicio justus, in sententiis proferendis discretus, in omni actione compositus, et morum honestate preclarus, &c.' Thus the said Author, agreeing verbatim with another, (2) which hath this title, or these words following, written in the beginning of his book—'Explicit secunda pars in tertio volumine Legendarum collectarum per Fratrem Petrum de Calo de Calgia ordinis Prædicatorum.' But the aforesaid author, Capgrave, addeth, that he, when K. Hen. III was dead, returned to Oxford, and was created D. of Div. under Rob. Kilwarby, that was afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, and in the year 1275 was consecrated Bishop of Hereford, and after his death canonized by the Pope. But before he was created, he did, according to the manner, study while he was young at Paris, under the tuition and special benefaction of John Peckham, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, as in certain letters of that Archbishop, (3) written an. 1281 to the Bishop of London, appears: For at that time he was by him pronounced excommunicated. After the death of the said Thomas de Cantelupo, which was at Civita Vecchia in Italy, an. 1282, his body was carried to Hereford, but his heart to the Monastery of Ashrugg in Bucks, where by the care and cost of Edmund, Earl of Cornwall, Founder thereof, it was reposed in a tomb of admirable workmanship on the north side of the choir, and afterwards had in very great veneration. By which tomb or near it the said Earl was afterward buried.

1264, or thereabouts, Chancellor Mr. HENRY de CICESTRE, as in an indented Chyrograph (4) between him and the University on the one part, and Rob. de Stanton on the other, concerning the demising of a tenement to the said Rob. in St. Giles' parish in the suburbs of Oxon. To which Chyrograph are witnesses Nich. de Stocwell, Mayor, Will. de Ew and Geoffry le Mercer, Provosts of the town of Oxford, [&c.]

1269. Chanc. Mr. THOMAS BEK, as in a certain Convention (2) between him and the University on the one part, and Wymund le Lyngedrauer of Oxford and Agnes his Wife on the other, &c. to which are witnesses John de Coleshall, Mayor, Jeffrey le Orfeure and Philip de Ewe, Provosts or Bailives of Oxford. In a certain charter, (3) dated on Monday next going before the feast of S. Matthias the Apostle, 51 Hen. III, Dom. 1266, I find that one Jacob, the son of Mr. Mosey, a Jew of London, by Henna his wife, conveyed to Walter de Merton, sometime Chancellor to the King, his houses in St. John Baptist's Parish in Oxford, for the building of an Hall or College for his Scholars, that he had lately settled at Meandon in Surrey. But because Mr. Antony Beke, and his brother Thomas Beke did then live and abide in the said houses he therefore made this condition with the said W. de Merton, that he should suffer the said Antony and Thomas to inhabit in the said houses from the feast of St. Michael following 'till three years after were expired, by paying to his Warden and Scholars that he was then about to settle in those, and other houses adjoining, an hundred shillings yearly. This is the effect of the Charter; and I thought fit to mention it, because the said Antony (stiled in the Charter Dominus Antonius Beke) and Thomas his brother were then students in the said houses, and that the former was afterwards Bishop of Durham, and the other Chancellor of this University (as before 'tis told you) afterward Treasurer of England, and at length, being very old, became Bishop of Lincoln an. 1319.

1270. Chanc. the same, THOMAS BEK, as from another writing, in the place here quoted, (4) appears.

Commissary (5) Mr. Rob. Steeton, D. of D.

1273. Chanc. Mr. WILLIAM de Bosco, as in the accompts of one Ralph Stokes, Chamberlain of the Town of Oxford, 2 Edw. I; (6) wherein under the title of Expenses I find it thus set down—'Item in duobus Pikerillis missis Mro. W. de Bosco Cancellario, quarta septimanæ Quadragesimæ, iiij fol.' For in these times, and since, it was an usual custom for the Burghers of Oxford, to present the Chancellor with gifts, especially at his entrance into his office, as from divers places is evident. This Mr. WILL. de Bosco was one of the first Fellows of Merton College, as in their writings I find, and so have I put him into the Catalogue of them, which I have with very great labour composed from multitudes of writings in that College Treasury and Chequer, and also from their Registers.

1274. Chanc. the same, W. de Bosco, as by circumstance it appears.

1276, or thereabouts, Chancellor Mr. EUSTACHIUS de NORMANVYLE, Master of Arts and Doctor of Decrees, as Leland (1) and others report. In a certain Charter dated 1251, I find these witneses, viz. Mr. Eustachius de Normanvyle, Frater minor, Mr. John le Noble, Mr. Roger de Barthone, &c. by which it appears that then he was a Minorite or Franciscan. About this time, (for the particular year appeareth not) JOHN de PONTISARA, who was Bishop of Wynchester, an. 1280, is reported to have borne the office of Chancellor of our University; but whether true or not, I cannot yet find; sure I am, that a little before his death he shewed himself a worthy Benefactor by giving (2) them a chest with 200 marks therein (called afterwards Winchester Chest) for the relief of poor Scholars. In perpetual memory of which, and for the health of his soul, the Masters decreed, that a solemn anniversary should be performed for him on the Vigils of St. Nicholas.

1280, or thereabouts, Chanc. Mr. HENRY de STAUNTON, Professor of the Canon Law, as in University College is evident. (3). He was now or lately, as I suppose, Vicar of the Church of St. Peter in the East.

1281. Chanc. (4) the same, H. de STAUNTON, as in a writing, dated this year in die Jovis in septimana Pentecostes, and in another on the second of the nones of May. (5)

1283. Chanc. Mr. ROGER de ROWELL or RODEWELL, as in a Chart. (8) dated 10 Jan. 12 Edw. I, sent from the King to him the said Chancellor for the taking off the sentence of Excommunication from Robert Wells, Bailive of Northgate hundred.

1284. Chanc. (9) the same, R. de ROWELL. About whose admission to this office a controversy (10) fell out between the University and the Bishop of Lincoln. Whether he served out this year, is doubtful, forasmuch as one Mr. WILLIAM PICKERILL occurs Chancellor this year, as in an inquisition de subtractionibus is evident. (11) The said Rothwell (12) occurs Chancellor 2 Id. Dec. this year; at which time John Peccham, Archbishop of Canterbury, appointed him his Commissary to hear and receive the accompts of Sir John, the son of Guy, Kt. the Executor of the last Testament of Maud D'Oyly, his mother.

1290. Chanc. (9) Mr. JOHN de LUDLAW, as in the said Annals, an. 1290. He resigned soon after, and Mr. JOHN de MONEMUTA, D. of Div. became Chancellor this year, as an Author (10) reports, and afterwards Bishop of Landaff. As to the assigning the time of this Chancellor, I find some contradiction, and that chiefly, because out of the Archives (11) of Lincoln Cathedral, 'tis said that he was the next successor to William de Kingscote, as in the admission of him by the Bishop's letters, printed in the Latin copy, is evident. Either therefore no Chancellor ought to come between Kingscote and Monemuta, or else the said Chancellor (Ludlaw) must be supposed to have borne his office in a small interval of time. (12) However it is, the Antiquary of Cambridge (13) (who hath stiled himself Londinensis) is deceived in that which he delivers concerning the confirmation of this Chancellor running thus:—"Episcopus enim ita confirmare solebat; 'officium Cancellariæ Universitatis Oxoniæ tali Magistro in Theologia committimus, donec aliud dederimus in mandatis:' unde natum puto, quod diu is non

No wonder therefore it is that the said Antiquary is so blind in the affairs of Oxford, when in those of his own University he is so quick-sighted. That also he is so ignorant of the difference between the Chancellor of this University may easily be understood from his own words, (2) which he hath of the chief Magistrate of the University of Cambridge.—'Huic Academiae qui praefuit (saith he) ad multa secula Rector dicebatur: postea Cancellarius, nostra aetate Vicecancellarius, et Procancellarius appellatus est, Vicarius Cancellarii, de quo postea fusius, nam Cancellarius hodie privatus homo non est Academiae, ut olim, sed ex Magnatibus aliquis, qui favet literis, ejus loco jam praeficitur Procancellarius, &c.'——From whence we cannot but see, how he doth confound together the Chancellor and Vicechancellor, or Prochancellor, when in the mean time he omits the ancient word Commissary, which so often occurs in the books and muniments of each University.

Upon what account the said Harcla is reputed a Benefactor to the University, I as yet scarce know, unless it was for his zeal in obtaining divers privileges for the University. His anniversary points at the 24th of June in the University Calendar. (4) 1314. Chanc. the same. In the beginning of this year in the month of April (as it seems) the office of Chancellor of this University being then or suddenly to be void, the Bishop of Lincoln (5) sent out his letters under a grievous anathema dat. 4 nones of April, that none either as Cancellarius natus, or otherwise, exercise the jurisdiction of Chancellor in the University until some person was admitted to that office by him. The reason why, he tells us not in those letters; and whether they at present were obeyed by the Academians is doubtful, because in the rescript of Edw. II, concerning the confirmation of the privileges of the University of Oxford, dat. March 11 following (an. 8 Reg.) is direct mention of Henry de Harcla, then Chancellor of the said University. And whether that inhibition of the Diocesan was in following years observed, especially as to the election of the Chancellor, seemeth not to be from one or two (6) statutes concerning elections, published by the Academians on the feast of St. Gregory, an. 1443. In which mention being made of the senior Theologist, we must understand him to be no other person than Cancellarius natus; who according to the ancient custom of the University, is to govern it when the Chancellorship is void, deduced and brought down even to the days of our grandfathers.

when the Masters ceased from their Lectures, which was 'in feria tertia ante Pentecosten,' the Chancellor also would renounce his office, and another forthwith chosen for the two next years following.

Proctors { Will. de Skelton of Mert. Coll.

Mr. { Job. de Fenton.

As for the said Proctors (for whom I have no great authority for their undergoing their office this year) the senior of them was afterwards one of the Canons of Wells, and gave to the University a Chest (2) containing an hundred marks, called Cista de Selton: the other was as I think of Balliol College.

1324. Chanc. (3) Mr. WILLIAM de ALBURWYKE, of Mert. Coll. D. of Div. and Chantor of York. He was at this time Principal of Broadgates' Hall in St. Mary's Parish, and gave (4) in caution for it this year to the Canons of Osney, Lords thereof.

1325. Chanc. (5) the same, Mr. W. de ALBURWYKE.

Commissary general (6) Mr. RICHARD KAMSHALE, now of Merton College, but lately of Balliol.

Proctors { Will. de Harryngton

Mr. (7) { Thom. de Bradwardyne } of Mert. Coll.

The senior Proctor was afterward D. of D. and gave divers books, and other things to his College. The other well known to the generality of Scholars for his works extant, was through divers preferments Archbishop of Canterbury. This year the said Chancellor summoning Will. de Burchestre, the Mayor of the Town, to appear before him in St. Mary's Church, did there after some expostulation (8) excommunicate him for translating the pillory from its usual place. Who thereupon appealing to the Congregation of Regent Masters, did afterward notwithstanding desert his appeal, and at length upon entreaty was absolved by the Commissary Mr. R. Kamshale.

1326. Chanc. (9) Mr. THOMAS de HOTHAM, HOTHUM, HODHAM, or HOTHUN (so many ways I find him written) Doctor of Div.

1327. Chanc. (10) the same, Mr. T. de HOTHAM.

Drokenesford) when he had late twentie years three months and nine dayes, to whom succeeded Mr. Ralf de Shrewsburie, sometime Chancellor of the Univerſitie of Oxon.'

1329. Chanc. (3) Mr. ROGER de STRETTON or STRATTON, D. D. by the ceasing of Mr. Shrewsbury.

1330. Chanc. (4) Mr. NEALE de WAURE or WAVERY, D. D. lately Fellow of Merton College, now Canon of St. David's.

1333. Chanc. (7) the same, whom I find written in one of the places here quoted, by the name of RICHARD (not Ralf) RADYN. So that whether it may be understood for Richardus Radyn, or Richardus filius Radulphi, is doubtful.

Commissary General this year, or thereabouts, was RICH. fil. RADULPHI or FITZRAUF, D. of D. or else of both the Laws, and Dean of Lichfield. He is reported by some (8) authors, ignorant of the names and distinctions of Magistrates and officers of the University, that he was Chancellor thereof, and that he, according to (9) another author, bore that office this year; though nothing of him occurs in the Archives of the Church of Lincoln, or the University. The Writer (10) of the Acts and Monuments, who sometimes reports things more true than the rest, concerning this person, tells us that he, being Archdeacon of Lichfield, was designed Commissary (not Chancellor) of the University by K. Edw. III, but with no reference to the year when 'twas. The reason why his name occurs not with us, was without doubt, the constant residence of the Chancellors of the University in this age and long after. Under, and by whose name, (not by Commissaries) were all things in the University acted and done. His effigies in sacerdotal vestments over it, was not long since to be seen in Lichfield Cathedral in the first window, on the south side of the Choir, with this inscription by it, 'Richardus Radulphi filius, Armachanus, hujus Ecclesiæ Decanus.' He continued Dean there till 1347, [when he became Archbishop of Armagh,] and then one Simon de Griselý succeeded.

1335. Chancellor, Mr. ROBERT de STRATFORD of Merton College, Archdeacon of Canterbury, and soon after Lord High Chancellor of England. In his time the ancient prophecy of Merlin concerning the translation of the University to Stanford, did take effect: But in a short time by his endeavours annulled, and the Scholars called back to their old seat, as in the Annals this year may be more fully seen. What remaineth to be spoken in his praise (which occurs in a certain Epistle (3) of the University to the Archbishop of York, [Wolsey] about the year 1514) I shall here insert:—‘habuerunt nostri majores suos Mecenates, tibi tamen longe impares, nec conferendos, ut reverendum Leycestriae Priorem (meaning Ph. de Repingdon) et præclarum Robertum Stratford Cantuariensem Archidiaconum, qui valentes plurimum apud suos augustos, sue memores altricis matris, eam quam plurimis decorarunt ornamentis et præclaris accumularunt beneficiis, &c.’ Thus the University; and without doubt he deserved the said commendation, as certain Chancellors in some other respects did, namely, THO. GASCOIGN and HENRY SEVER, for the scholastic discipline which they encouraged and promoted. Furthermore, as for this Chancellor, he, by reason of the troublesome factions between the southern and northern scholars, did for the reformation of them (as is by one (4) reported) appoint one of the Proctors to be always a Southern and the other a Northern man. This ROBERT de STRATFORD was brother to John de Stratford, Archbishop of Canterbury, both born at Stratford on Avon in Warwickshire, sons of Robert de Stratford and Isabel his wife, and both bred in Merton College.

1350. Chanc. (8) Mr. WILLIAM de PALMORNA, D. of D. sometime Fellow and Rector of Exeter College, and one of those twelve Fellows which in the year 1340 were put into Queen's Coll. by the Founder thereof. Concerning his confirmation to this office, great controversy arose between the University and the Diocesan, as in this year is recited in the Annals. Which controversy the Antiquary (9) of Cambridge takes not only an occasion to mention, but objects it as a great reproach to the Oxonians; as if (as 'tis probable) they were not so well instructed as the Cantabrigians were about these times in making use of those feigned Diplomas or Bulls of P. Honorius, Sergius, and Eleutherius against the great power and injuries of their Diocesan. But let it be as tis, the Oxonians had no other designs now or before, but what were honest and simple, and were so far from counterfeiting any Bull, that they would rather lay their privileges at stake, than injure their consciences; though now if they had been minded, needed not so to Lewes de Charlton was Chancellor this year, is without doubt false; for if it had been so, his name would have occurred in the muniments or books of the University, especially in those several Charters that issued out this year relating to the great conflict. Furthermore also I doubt, whether the said Lew. de Charlton is not taken by the said Author and Baleus (1) for Lewis Caerleon, the most famous mathematician of his time; which Lew. Caerleon, sometimes called and written by the name of Dr. Lewes, flourished 1482, under K. Rich. III, by whom, for the affection which the said Lewes bore to Hen. Earl of Richmond (afterwards Hen. VII) was spoiled of all he had, and cast at length into prison, as Chronicles do report.

A certain Author (6) remembreth John Hotham, sometime Provost of Queen's Coll. in Oxford, to have been Bishop of Ely an. 1316, and also Chancellor of Oxford, which if the same with this our Hotham, then doth he commit an error in assigning him his time. But if he means another person of that name, then upon what account the said John Hotham, Bp of Ely, an. 1316, was Provost of Queen's Coll. (which was not then in being) I cannot discern. In the chancel of Chinnor church in Oxfordshire, I find one Joh. Hotham, Mr. or Dr. of Divinity, to be there buried under a flat marble, the epitaph on which you may read among the Provosts of Queen's College.

In the beginning (6) of which, in a large capital Letter is drawn to the life the Effigies of K. Edw. III, sitting in a Chair giving a Charter, (6*) with his seal thereunto, to the said Chancellor WYLTON, who receives it kneeling in his doctoral habit of red colour. He is reported by (7) some to have been a writer, but upon my examination of the matter, I find it false; for the books attributed to him, especially that entitled 'Questiones de anima,' Thom. Wylton, who lived before his time wrote it, as the Copy thereof in Balliol College Library attesteth; which coming into the hands of the said Will. Wylton, he gave it to the said Library, as the inscription on the cover thereof attesteth, so that then he was the giver only, and not author or writer thereof.

The name of the other Proctor I find not. He that is here set down was first of Balliol, afterward of University College, and Principal of St. Mildrid's Hall. The Pope (10) sending out his Bull about this time for the taking of John Wyclave, was rejected by the Proctors, and therefore they were evilly censured. Which Bull the said Wyclave refuted (as 'tis reported) in each point. See in the Annals or historical part, an. 1378.

Mr. (6) { Richard Pester.

Of what house the senior Proctor was, I find not, neither also of what the junior, when he bore his office, he having been of three Societies successively, viz. of Exeter, University, and Merton.

1380. Chanc. Mr. WILL. BERTON, and not Pro-chancellor, as (7) one that often confounds and mistakes the titles of the Magistrates of the University delivereth. He, this year, Oct. 2, obtained the King's breve (8) for the repairing the pavement of the Streets of Oxford. A great enemy he was to Wycleve, and his disciples, as well in his writings as government of the University; who, if not by his vigilancy their career had been stoppt, would have contracted greater force and authority.

1381. Chanc. Mr. ROBERT RYGGE or RUGGE, D. of D. and Canon of Exeter, as by his letters, (9) dated June 1 this year, sent to one John Trevaux, Bac. of Laws, now living in Wales, whereby the said Trevaux was warned to appear before him in St. Mary's Church on a day prefixed, to make answer in cause of a debt. The said Chancellor was first of Exeter, afterward Fellow of Merton College.

asmuch as he seemed now to favour Wyclave and his disciples, Mr. ROBERT RUGGE before mentioned succeeded either about the latter end of May or beginning of June. He is the same, whom (1) Fox in treating of the articles of Wyclave, stiles Ryggeus, and after his manner, as I have before observed, calls him Chancellor, then Commissary, Pro-chancellor and Vice-chancellor. However it is, he by the name of 'Robert Rygge Chancellor of the University of Oxon,' was constituted (2) with John Lovell, Hugh Segrave and Robert Tresilian, Justices of the peace for the county of Oxford this year. Besides these two Chancellors authors tell us of two more this year, and those are, first, Nicholas Hereford (now or lately Fellow of Queen's College) as Wallingham (3) saith, but how it can be, I understand not, for at that time when the said Nicholas, upon account of declaring his opinions, preached (4) at St. Frideswide's Cross in Oxford, May 15 this year, being then Ascension day, Mr. ROBERT RUGGE was Chancellor (he chief part of the sermon itself, which he delivered, entituled 'Sermo Mri Nicholai Hereford, S. T. Profess. contra omnes status et gradus Ecclesiasticos,' being examined and pronounced the same which he preached by a Public Notary, as his name to it testifieth) and therefore if so be the said Nicholas did bear that office, it was but a few days before that of the Ascension, because the Chancellors were in these times chosen according to the statute before recited, 'in feria tertia ante Pentecosten.' Furthermore also, 'tis not likely, that after the said sermon was delivered, he should bear that office, because that for his opinions so declared he was censured, imprisoned and persecuted. The other Chancellor was, as the said Fox (5) conjectureth, William Rugge; but of him I know nothing, being the same, without doubt, with Robert Rugge before mentioned. Thus you have in one year's space, four Chancellors, if the authors who report the two last, may be believed. However it is, so great was the difference in opinions, diversity in preaching, and change of Governors of the University about these times, that it gave occasion, without doubt, to an acute Sophister (6) now or lately studying in Oxford, to argue in his sophisms thus—'Cras Cancellarius prædicabit; ergo qui est Cancellarius, vel qui cras erit Cancellarius, prædicabit &c.'

Commiss. Fr. PETER STOKES, D. of D. and Carmelite, as several authors (7) seem to intimate, he being appointed to confute the heresies (as they were now called) of Wyclave.

Mar. 9, 6 Ric. II, which is this year. One Walter Dish or Dafh also, being reported by some (2) to have been employed as a judge in examining the articles of Wycleve this year, I doubt not but that he is the same with the junior Proctor here set down, and the same also whom Baleus (3) and Pitseus (4) do report falsely, and Leland (5) doubtfully, that he had received his academical education in Cambridge, [and was the Pope's Legate. Merton, Oriel, Exeter, Queen's, Balliol, Canterbury, and New, from the paying of tenths, which by the care of the said vigilant Chancellor was effected this year. There is also to be seen the like Composition for the exoneration of Magdalen College, made long after this time, whether as a College or Hospital, because founded upon the site of that of St. John Bapt. These and such like Compositions are those mentioned in the great Charter (9) of K. H. VIII, dat. April 1, an. reg. 14, wherein that King, speaking of the manner of taxing the Parishes for tenths and fifteenths to the King by the Chancellor and Mayor together, and not severally, saith, that they shall have power, 'assidendi et taxandi quamcunque parochiam in villa predicta et suburbiis ejusdem, juxta et secundum quantitatem integram dicte ville et suburbiorum ejusdem, taxatam, limitatam, et assensam in scaccario nostro, ad hujusmodi quintamdecimam et decimam solvend. deductis et deducendis omnibus et singulis allocacionibus et solucionibus que solvi et allocari debent in parte solucionis vel allocacionis hujusmodi quintedecime et decime, ratione aliquarum compositionum vel convencionum inter aliqua collegia five alia loca quecunque infra villam et suburbia predicta, five inter aliqua alia loca extra villam et suburbia ejusdem ex una parte, et Majorem, Aldermannos, Ballivos, et Burgenses ville dicte ex altera parte fact. five fiend. &c.' The meaning of which words 'juxta quantitatem integram,' is, that this money for tenths and fifteenths should be raised according to the rate, wherewith the Town of Oxford is burdened in the book of his Majesty's Exchequer, and what that is, is well known.

First, RICHARD COURTENAY (3) before mentioned:

Secondly, JOHN BANARD, D. of D. a Friar of the Order of St. Austen in Oxford, mentioned by the title of 'Cancellarius Oxon,' in an indenture (4) between him the said Chanc. on the one part, and Will. Erburfield and Rob. Chesylhampton, Collectors of a certain tax in Magdalen parish, granted lately by the Parliament to the King, dat. in fest. S. Martini 13 Hen. IV, Dom. 1411.

Thirdly, Mr. RICHARD COURTENAY again.

Which change of Officers was occasioned (as it seems) by Archbishop Arundell's Visitation of the University, which he intended to make this year. There is another Chancellor for this year in Babington's Catalogue, namely, Mr. WILL. CLYNT, mentioned in 1408, but I suppose 'tis false.

Proctors { John Byrch of Univerf. Coll.
Mr. (5) { Benedict Brent of Exeter Coll.

But the Catalogue (6) before mentioned hath these, viz.

Mr. { Robert Haclum or Aclom
 { Richard Baron of Mert. Coll.

And another (7) note dated in festo S. Felicis (in the month of May) an. 1411, which day was the first of the Term, hath these,

Mr. { John Green
 { W. Symond.

That the former were Proctors for this year is not to be doubted, and that also they were ejected and imprisoned, may be fully seen in the Annals or historical part for this year: therefore I suppose the second Proctors succeeded for a time, and the other only Deputies.

1412. Chancellor, First, Mr. WILL. SULBURY, whose name (8) occurs at the time of Pentecost:

Secondly, Mr. RICH. COURTENAY, who (1) occurs also Nov. 20, and before:

Thirdly, Mr. RICH. SNETISHAM, if Bale (2) may be believed.

Proctors { Gilbert Kymer of Durham Coll. as it seems.
Mr. (3) { William Symond of Univ. Coll.

1413. Chancellor, First, (4) Mr. WILLIAM SULBURY again.

Secondly, (5) Mr. WILLIAM BAROW, or BAROUGH, Doctor of Decrees, afterward Bishop of Bangor [and Carlisle,] between which two the year was divided. 'Tis said (6) also that THOMAS PRESBURY before mentioned was Chancellor this year, and at that time when the twelve Doctors of Oxon, sent an (7) Epistle to the Synod of the Clergy in the Diocese of Canterbury concerning Wycleve and his doctrine, but how true I cannot yet discern.

Proctors { William Symmond }
Mr. (8) { Gilbert Kymer } as before.

1414. Chanc. Mr. WILLIAM BAROW again, his name (9) occurring at the feast of Pentecost. The author of Babington's Catalogue is pleased to tell us that Mr. John Snetisham D. of D. was Chancellor this year, but the truth thereof I much doubt, because John Snetisham was not elected Fellow of Merton Coll. 'till about 1420, and therefore I take it to be Richard Snetisham, a learned writer of his time, and a great enemy to Wycleve. However of him I find great commendation in a (10) gratulatory Epistle of the University to John Lacy, Bishop of Exeter (of which place John Snetisham was Canon and Chancellor) wherein they give the Bishop many thanks for him. In Brook's grand (11) abridgement he is only written J. S. and no more: like to a note also in (12) another place, wherein I find Rich. de B. to have been Chancellor of Oxon about these times, utterly as yet unknown to me. Of what House the said Snetisham was, I know not: sure I am, that one of his name was Fellow of Mert. Coll. in the reigns of Hen. V and VI.

Proctors { Robert Camell
Mr. (13) { John Colum or Colum.

1415. Chanc. (14) Mr. WILLIAM BAROW again, about these times Principal of Haberdashers' Hall in St. Mary's Parish.

Proctors { Henry Woodchurch of Mert. Coll.

1416. Chanc. (1) Mr. THOM. CLARE, whose name occurs with the title of Chancellor after Pentecost. But the said Catalogue will have Dr. BAROW to be Chancellor this year also.

Proctors { Robert Dinkely as before
Mr. (2) { Will. Andrew of Exeter Coll.

1417. Chanc. Dr. BAROW, as Hare (3) pleaseth, who the next year was made Bishop of Bangor, and at length of Carlisle. But he keeping the office of Chancellor not long, (or if at all this year may be a doubt) Mr. THOM. CLARE succeeded him. (4)

Mr. (5) { Rob. Tonge of Ball. afterward of Univ. Coll.

1418. Chanc. (6) Mr. THOM. CLARE for the beginning of the year, but he resigning, or else having occasion to be absent, Mr. WALTER TREUGOFFE, D. D. now or lately of Exeter College, (7) succeeded him.

Proctors { Will. Moulton of Univerf. Coll.
Mr. (8) { John Worthill, or Warthill, of Ball. Coll.

1419. Chanc. Fr. ROBERT COLEMAN, a Franciscan of Norwich, whose name, with the title of Chancellor, is mentioned in a writing (9) dated about the time of Pentecost, but he giving up his office soon after, Dr. TREUGOFF beforementioned succeeded, and occurs (10) with the title of Chancellor put to his name Nov. 3.

Proctors { Rich. Heath
Mr. (11) { Rich. Burnham.

Chancellor, the same (12) Dr. TREUGOFF; but he resigning this year, Mr. THOMAS RODEBURNE, lately of Merton College, (13) was by the major part of non Regents, and by the faculties of Divinity, Canon Law and Medicine, pronounced Chancellor. Which office he not accepting (or if he did 'twas but for a little while) the said Dr. TREUGOFF became (14) Chancellor again as from divers scripts is evident. He was afterward Archpriest or Dean of the Oratory of the holy Trinity of Burton alias Berton in the Isle of Wight; which Deanery he resigned into the hands of the Bishop of Winchester 1440, in order to have the said Oratory settled on the College

The senior of these Proctors was afterwards Dean of the Cathedral of St. Paul; and the junior [Canon of Windsor,] and Physician to K. Henry VI; he also became Archd. of Richmond, [and Bishop of Chichester.]

Apr. 10. From which it appears, that he was then re-invested in his office, which was sooner than the Statute allowed; for the usual election of Chancellors in these times, was not till the Regents had ceased their ordinary lectures and disputations, that is "in feria tertia ante Pentecosten," and the day of Pentecost fell this year on the first of June; but this by the way.

For the keeping of which treasure, and lending it forth to Students that were necessitous, two Keepers were annually chosen. Afterward Bouchier became Archb. of Canterbury, and at length Cardinal sub tit. S. Cyriaci in Thermis, in which great dignities he being not unmindful of his Mother, the University of Oxford, left many things thereunto, the particulars of which not appearing, I shall pass on, and only take notice of an (1) acquittance made by the University to John Yong, Bishop of Calipolie, for an 100l. of the moneys of the said Archbishop, which by him was given to us, and by the said Yong recovered long after, either of his Nephew or great Nephew, at which time Will. Warham, Archbishop of Canterbury, was Chancellor of the University. Hare (2) is pleased to tell us that Dr. Kymer was Chancellor also this year, when from many authorities it appears to the contrary. If he did bear that office at all, it must be in the beginning of this year, between the Annunciation and the third holiday before Pentecost, but that cannot be within, because Bouchier (3) was Chancellor in the latter end of the last year.

1443 Chanc. the said Dr. HENRY SEVER, in which year the Members of the University, who had great respects for this Chancellor, wrote a Commendatory (1) Epistle in his behalf to P. Eugenius IV, to the end that he would be pleased to write to the King (to whom the said Sever was Chaplain) that he would prefer him according to his merits; whereupon, being promoted, as I conceive, (2) resigned his office in February; for then Dr. WESTKARRE, before mentioned, (3) became Cancellarius natus, and a little after upon his absence Mr. JOHN ANDEVYR, (4) and likewise upon his, Dr. THOMAS GASCOIGNE, (5) the one occurring by that title the second, and the other the thirteenth of March this year. In the mean time the University (6) solicited Mr. Richard Praty, Bishop of Chichester (sometime an Oxford Student) that he would be pleased to take upon him the Office of Chancellor; but he refusing it, the said Dr. GASCOIGNE was elected (7) the 14th of the said month by the unanimous consent of all Doctors and Masters concerned in the intrinsic election of the Chancellor. As for the form of that and certain other elections in these times were thus: Four Masters in each faculty (called in such affairs by the names sometimes of Doctors) were by the Chancellor or Commissary and Proctors admitted into the public Assembly; and being so done, they for the election of two Astantes or Instantes did take the votes of all Non Regent Masters by scrutiny, three proclamations by the Beadle being in that time made, of which one was to alter or change (if any Master whom before he had named pleased) which two Instantes, after they were elected and lawfully admitted by the Chancellor and Proctors, they named four other Masters for the intrinsic election; which being finished, the said Astantes and the four Masters receded into some private place (suppose in one of the Chapels of St. Mary's Church) where the Chancellor and Proctors searching into the votes, one after another, did at length pronounce him elected, to whom they found most suffrages given. And so after the same manner was Dr. GASCOIGNE (descended of a worshipful family, son and heir of Richard Gascoigne, Lord of the Manor of Hunsfleet in Yorkshire) elected Chancellor. See more of him in the Latin Copy in Oriel Coll.

Afterward he enjoyed that office for a certain time as one not elected, because that then he had not taken his oath; for having liberty given to him to deliberate whether he would take the office upon him, governed only as Cancellarius natus. In the mean time the University, who doubted that he would not take the Chancellorship upon him, they by their letters, wherein they much extol him, trouble the King (6) with the matter, signifying farther that he would be pleased to be an instrument for, or else command, him to take the office on him; but what success the said letters wrought I know not. However not long after, he took his oath and accepted of it, and being in the interval sometime absent, or in private receded, ROBERT BURTON, D. This year May 13th in Congregation then held, it was granted (9) by the Masters that the honourable Dr. KYMER might remain in his office of Chancellor for the two next years following. The reason for it was, that forasmuch as the executors of [Henry] Beaufort, Bishop of Winchester, had given 500 marks toward the building of the new Schools upon condition that they might be finished within five years after the gift, the said Dr. Kymer, together with Elias Holcot, Warden of Merton College, had entered into bonds on the said contract: (10) Which, though not performed in that time, yet the executors sued them not, but suffered the remainder of the money (if any left) to be bestowed on that edifice.

Seeing therefore that CHAUNDLER was Chancellor of the University, as from record is manifest, Balrus (8) from Leland is deceived in his report, that he was only Commissary or Prochancellor. As for the Author Dr. Marten, here quoted [below], who saith that Dr. Chaundler was created Doctor by Thomas Gascoigne, it must not be understood that Gascoigne was then public Professor of Divinity, or held that chair, but only that he was Chancellor; for as Gascoigne saith (9) of himself, he, while he was Chancellor, created 35 Doctors of Divinity. resigning his office Jan. 17 this year, was at the same time elected again; and the reason why it was so soon before he had compleated his two years was, because that several controversies depended between the Academians and Burghers of Oxford; for this year, which is 37 of Henry VI, that memorable Composition, containing various Articles, relating to the controversy, was made and finished: [as before in the Annals for this year.] To these matters I shall add, that whereas Dr. Godwyn in his Commentaries de Præfulibus Angliæ reports (1) that John Chaundler, Bishop of Salisbury, was of New College (meaning this T. Mr. (1) { William Marbyll. } or thereabout.

The senior Proctor, who was afterward Principal of Magdalen Hall, and a skilful Physician of his time, desired (2) his executors on his death-bed, an. 1509, that they should cause the common Bellman to make proclamation throughout all the publick places in Oxford, that if there was any person that had received any injury from him, especially in the time of his Proctorship, they should give him or them satisfaction. A remark much like that of one John Falley, an honest Scholar of the University, who made (3) proclamation at his departure thence about two years before concerning the paying of his debts.

[One William Marble was admitted Fellow of All Souls College in 1486, and was probably the junior Proctor of this year.]

probable, that the diffension which arose between those parties more than 400 years before this time was in some measure revived. All which he diligently performing, was admitted to the office (2) of Southern Proctor. As for the junior Proctor, he was afterward one of the first Fellows of Brasenose College, where behaving himself very displeasing to the FOUNDER SUTTON, was by him expelled his Fellowship, and disabled by a clause at the end of the Statutes of that House from taking above one meal's meat, or one night's lodging therein. dispensed with him from circuiting, and certain exercises preceding, if so be it should happen that he should be admitted to the reading of the book of Sentences. The reason of this was, because he was Commissary, and that it did not become a Doctor to circuit for an inferior degree. His supplication was granted, conditionally, that he preach a sermon in the Church of St. Peter in the East; so that his exercise being all before performed, viz. his twice answering in the Schools, and his four times preaching in St. Mary's Church, (all done in the space of one year) was on August 4 1524 presented and admitted to the degree of Bach. of Div. by Dr. John Young, [then Warden of New College, and titular] Bishop of Callipolis, in the presence of eight Doctors of Divinity. In which Degree remaining till the year 1527 would have then proceeded Doctor in that faculty, but was, as I conceive, prevented by death.

(6) REG. secundum Electionum Collegio
Magd. pertinens, fol. 12 b.

What I have observed of this Chancellor, who by many hath been accounted an eminent Scholar of his time, is, that he was born (1) in Buckinghamshire, bred in King's College in Cambridge, from whence coming to Oxford for preferment, was made one of the junior Canons of the Cardinal's College, an. 1525. And being then but Bachelor of Arts, was, with others, incorporated (2) at Oxford in the same faculty, Dec. 17, the same year: at which time, or soon after, (3) supplicating that he might answer at the Austen Fryery, and answer the Masters in formal disputations, had his desire granted, conditionally, that he oppose also at the said Fryery: That he proceeded (4) Master of Arts with us July 2, 1526, having done his exercise for that degree partly at Cambridge and partly here: Also that he was one of those Cantabrigians that was forced to leave Cardinal College, for following and too much abetting the opinions of Luther: That he was afterward Master of Eton School, where by his doctrine the youth profited much: That he proceeded D. D. at Cambridge about the year 1540, being then or before Archdeacon of Ely: That he became Dean of the new erected Cathedral of Osney Jan. 8, an. 1543, (4*) and from thence translated to Christ Church Nov. 4, 1546, at which time the said See was translated to that place: That the next year he was chosen Chancellor of this University, being in great favor with the then King. By which election it fell out that as the Oxonians enjoyed a Cantabrigian, so was it with Cambridge in former time by their election of John Bromyard, an Oxonian, and an eminent writer in the reign of R. II, and since that Dr. Thomas Ruthall in the reign of Hen. VII. For the proving of the first to be an Oxonian, we need not go far, because (5) Leland, Bale and Pits tell us so; and for the other, who was Secretary to K. Hen. VII, and afterward Bp of Durham, divers Epistles (6) written to him by the University testify as much, (though said to the contrary by him (7) that hath written the book De Præsulibus Angliæ) among which is one (8) to crave his assistance against the Oppidans of Oxford in a suit of law with the University about the year 1516, and in it this passage—
Perge igitur sancte pater, perge ut cepisti tue illustrissime succurrens Matri ne ab infestissimis Oppidanis paciatur injuriam: nam immunitates quas munificentissimi Reges nobis concesserint, &c. That while the said Dr. Cox was Chancellor of the University, he acted many things that have been odious to posterity, as may be fully discovered in the foregoing Annals. That by the favour of King Edward VI he became his Chancellor, Almoner, and Dean of Westminster, having been before his Tutor. That upon the coming in of Queen Mary, he among others fled to Frankfort, and what he did there and elsewhere may be seen in a book called the 'Troubles of Frankfort.'

Vicechanc. or Commiff. WALTER WRYGHT, (1) LL. D. sometime Principal of Peckwater's Inn, now Head or Governor of Durham College, [Preb. of Sarum and Winchester,] and Archdeacon of Oxford, designed to his office of Vicechanc. by Dr. COXE about St. John Baptist's time. For Dr. TRESHAM having borne that office 15 years (as Demetrius Phalereus had been Rector of Athens ten) did, by a dispensation (2) granted for absence from Exequies, Masses, Congregations, Convocations, and Scholastical Acts, (as one wearied out by his former trouble) retire in private 'till he had recruited and recollected himself: and then like an honest Governor, and one of a public spirit, retook the ensigns of authority upon him, as it shall be afterward shewed.

Vicechanc. the same, [Dr. WALTER WRYGHT,] who, whether he was again designed for a certain time I know not. For truly in the Statutes (7) now made or to be made, I find that the office of Prochancellor was not to be void every year, unless on the next day after the Cal. of October; that also a new Prochanc. was not then to be elected before 24 hours were past after the time of the ceasing of the former, and that the said election was wholly to be finished by the major part of the Regents before three days were past. But this, as it seems, could not be this year so suddenly, when as the said Prochancellor Dr. WRIGHT did before, in the time of the Visitation in the month of May and after, enjoy his office. Neither is it that any may wonder, that the ancient and vulgar name of Commissary should be changed into the name of Prochancellor or Vicechancellor, for the change sprung rather from an affected purity of speech, than from the common use of speaking: yet in the King's rescripts at this time and in others, as also in common discourse, each name was used promiscuously, though signified but one and the same Magistrate, written in our first and most ancient statutes Cancellarii Commissarius and Commissarius generalis, and in certain Charters Cancellarii locum tenens. In the Edwardine Statutes, about this time made, he is written, as I have told you, Procancellarius, and in the Statutes of Cardinal Pole, Vicecancellarius; in which sense are the glosses of Will. Linwode on the Bonifacian Constitution de pænis, (which beginneth thus, 'Æternæ sanctio' &c.) to be understood, viz. that the Archbp of Canterbury hath in the College of [Bishops a Provincial] Dean, who is Bishop of London, a Chancellor who is [Bishop of] Wynchester, and a Vicechancellor who is [Bishop of] Lyncoln, &c. But from the High Chancellor of the University, the Vicechancellor doth receive his nomination or deputation, from the Convocation his approbation and confirmation, and from the Charters of the University his authority. He is also called the Chancellor's Vicegerent, as in the year 1230 and 1274 you may see; and again in a certain (1) Commission concerning the peace, directed by K. Edward III, Dec. 1, an. reg. 32, to the Chancellor, 'ac gerenti vices ejus ibidem, nec non Majori Ville Oxon qui nunc sunt, vel qui pro tempore erunt, &c.' The name of Vicechancellor which now began to take place before other, I have not as yet seen mentioned before the year 1448 as you may before under that year see, and then no more (as it seems) than the Commissaries Deputy. But worst of all in my opinion doth Bale err in the lives which he writes (2) of Walter Haddon and (3) John Young, Cambridge authors, (who in the time of K. Edward's Visitation there and a little after, bore the office of Vicechancellor) by confounding the name of Chancellor with Rector, and Rector with Vicechancellor, totally omitting the name of Prochancellor. Certainly he was altogether ignorant of the titles of the Governors of that University (though educated therein) or else he would not have committed such errors, neither have forgotten in the life of King Edward VI, to make mention of the Reformation of religion and learning by his Commissioners at the said place, and speak also of the Statutes that were then published there for that purpose.

(3) Ib. cent. 9, nu. 99.
(4) I fol. 122, b. &c.

Of these Proctors and their office I shall observe, First, that those for the year before going and these for this, remained in their places, and were not ejected by the Visitors: Secondly, that the time when they were elected appears not through the negligence of the Scribe that now was: Thirdly, that one Will. Lyngley occurs Proctor this year, and supplicated, (1) that whereas he was subject to sickness, Mr. Christopher Goodman, (now or lately of Brasenose College, afterward of Christ Church) might supply his office 'till the day after that of St. Michael, at which time according to the Edwardine Decrees was an election to be made of Proctors, Supervisors and Taxers. But in the said supplicate, I suppose, is a mistake, for instead of Leon. Lyngbam the Scribe hath written Will. Lyngley, there being no such Master in the University, as in the Catalogue of them (which with great exactness I have composed from the Registers) may be seen: Fourthly, that the junior Proctor, Richard Hughes or Hewes was, when chosen, but Regent ad placitum, by which election the order of K. Hen. VIII, mentioned in 1541, was again broken: Fifthly, that he was not of Oriel, as our Antiquary (2) in his very imperfect Catalogue of Proctors tells us, but of Magdalen College, for that Hughes which he means, became Fellow of Oriel (3) 1529, and resigned 1534, being then Master of Arts, and about to marry.

1550 Chanc. the same, [Dr. RICHARD COXE.]

Vicechanc. the same, viz. Dr. WRYGHT, but he giving up his office according to the Edwardine Statutes in the beginning of Michaelmas term, Dr. WILLIAM TRESHAM, who had been often Commissary before, was elected Vicechancellor after this manner, according to the said Statutes. (4) The office of Vicechancellor being void, the Beadles at the command of the Curators called a Congregation of Regents to be celebrated at nine in the morning, or one in the afternoon. They being assembled, the Proctors, with two senior Doctors, or in their turns two senior Bachelors of Divinity, stand in scrutiny, and after their own Suffrages are written, and at length the rest, the senior Proctor reads them openly and severally, and that person that had most, him they pronounced Vicechancellor.

The said Proctors, especially the Junior, were but past their Regency ad placitum when they were elected, the Senior having stood in the Act held Feb. 5, 1547, and the other July 16, 1548.

(4) Afterward being often called away, Mr. RICHARD MARTIAL, [sometime Fellow of Corpus Christi Coll.] Bach. of Div. [and Student] of Christ Church, was his Deputy. (5) Under whom that large Matriculation book, noted with the letter P on the dorse, containing all the Scholars' names, and their servants, then in the University, was made; the former Matriculations, whether in books or rolls of parchment (for such have there been, as is elsewhere remembered) being about these times lost and embezzled. Mr. JOHN WARNER, Doctor [and Regius Professor] of Physic, [Warden] of All Souls Coll. 1552 Chanc. the same, viz. Dr. RICHARD COXE, to whom it was by a Convocation granted (1) this year, July 19, that whereas he was about to resign his office of Chancellor within a short time, he should never after be burdened with the office of Vicechancellor. The 14th of Nov. following he resigned it, (2) and the 18th day the Congregation of Regents and Non-Regents (3) elected Sir JOHN MASON, Knt. sometime Fellow of All Souls College, [lately Ambassador into several foreign countries,] installed Dean of Winchester, (in the place of Will. Kyngesmill the last Prior of S. Swithine's, and first Dean of the said Church of Winchester) 3 Edw. VI, Dom. 1549, afterward of the Privy Council to the King, and in great favour with him; which being in peace concluded, according to the said Statutes, was the first and last that was so, for in the choice of Cardinal POLE, who succeeded MASON, the old Statutes were followed, and the name and authority of Cancellarius natus was then revived. As for the way, according to the said new Statutes, by which Sir J. MASON was chosen, was thus: (4) The Beadles of the University having by command of the Prochancellor called a Congregation of Regents and Non Regents to be celebrated the next day at nine of the clock in the morning, the said Prochancellor and the Proctors, with the junior Doctor in Theology, Civil Law and Medicine being called to them, did in the said Congregation stand in scrutiny, and having given their own suffrages first in writing, took the others that were then in the House. Which being done, the senior Proctor did read them openly and distinctly, and him that had most suffrages (which was Sir JOHN MASON) they pronounced the Chancellor elected.

Vicechanc. or Prochanc. JAMES BROKES, D. D. [sometime Fel.] of C. C. C. bore that office in July and before. [He was now Master of Ball. Coll. and at length Bp of Gloucester.] Afterward RICHARD MARTIAL, D. of D. and one of the senior Students of Christ Church, who, having stood in the Act July 18 this year, was according to the new Statutes elected in Convocation (5) Prochancellor Oct. 3. 1556 Chanc. the same, viz. Sir JOHN MASON, Knt. who being about to resign his office, the University decreed (3) in a solemn Convocation, held June 25, that Cardinal POLE should succeed. Afterward the said Sir JOHN resigning by his letters read in Convocation Oct. 26 following, the most noble REYNOLD POLE, sometime of Magdalen College, now Archbishop of Canterbury, Cardinal of St. Mary in Cosmedin, or in Schola Græca, in Rome, and Legate a latere in this kingdom, was then elected Chancellor. (4) A Codicil (5) of which Election dat. Nov. 2 following, was afterward sent to him, wherein 'tis said, that he was elected perpetual Chancellor by the then Cancellarius natus, and the whole body of Regents and Non Regents. The said noble Cardinal is also reported to have been Chancellor of Cambridge, but as to the time when I find it false; for in the published Tables of the Officers of that University, (6) the time of his election is referred to the year 1554, when as he came not into England till the month of September that year, (7) and that also Steph. Gardiner, Bishop of Wynchester, was then Chancellor, continuing in that office till the day of his death, which as Baleus says, (8) was on the 13th of Nov. 1555. The said Cardinal also being not consecrated Archbishop of Canterbury till March 22, 1555, tis unlikely that the Cantabrigians would receive him for their Chancellor before his consecration. There is also a certain (9) person that saith he begun the Chancellorship Mar. 4, 1556, and another (John Stokes, Orator of that University) the same year. For at which time he spake a speech before the Visitors that came to visit the said University Jan. 11, an. 1557, congratulated the Cardinal for taking the office of Chancellor upon him the year going before, he thereby, with the Students of that University promising to themselves great matters that would follow. Which two persons, though they agree as to the year, yet from the aforesaid tables they dissent two years, making thereby the amphibiline succession defective as to this Chancellor, (as in others before) who now as Legate a latere, doth by his Commissioners or Visitors visit the said University which was for many ages before (as tis vainly reported) (10) exempt from such Visitations by the privileges granted by Pope Honorius the first, An. Dom. 624. Which exemption, with all others that they had, whether true or false, Thomas Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury in the reign of K. Hen. VIII, (sometime a Student of the said University) caused them to be cancelled and yielded up as frivolous. An instrument of which action, being made thereupon, and attested by many, was publicly read before K. Charles I, and his Council at Hampton Court in the month of May 1636, by the then Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Laud, who at that time endeavoured to make his Metropolitan Visitation in both Universities.

Commissary, Dr. WILLIAM TRESHAM, who performing his office till Nov. THOMAS RAYNOLDES, D. D. Warden of Merton Coll. and Dean of Exeter, was then designed Commissary or Vicechancellor by the Chancellor's letters (1) dat. [10th] of the said month during only his pleasure. By virtue of which he took his place, and had for his Deputy Dr. MARTIAL, [afore said, Dean of Christ Church and Preb. of Winchester.]

Mr. (6) { William Alyn again, now Princ. of St. Mary's Hall } Apr. 28.

Of these Proctors, though some things be said of them in the Annals of this book, under the year 1557, yet of them I shall observe these things following; viz. That Babyngton stood in Comitibus (as Inceptor in Arts) in an Act celebrated July 16, 1554; that in the year 1557 he was unanimously chosen Proctor; that in 1558 he was admitted Bachelor of Div: That in the year 1559, Feb. 19; he was the only Doctor of Div. that proceeded in an Act then celebrated, having before, in the same year, been elected Master or Head of Balliol College: Also that in 1560 he became Commissary or Vice-chancellor, Rector of Lincoln College, and Margaret Reader. Which sudden promotions are not to be attributed to the deserts of the person, but that the University was very empty, wanted Theologists to perform offices and duties, and that any one proceeded as he pleased. Lastly, as for Allyn he was born at Rossall (near Polton) in Lancashire, and having run through various preferments was at length made a Cardinal of Rome, under the title of St. Martin in Monte at Rome, [Archb. of Mechlin in Brabant, and Librarian of the Vatican.]

This year in a Convocation, held May 5, were letters (1) read from Nicholas Ormanet the Pope's Datary, [D. C. L. of Padua, and incorporated in the same degree here Jul. 21, 1556, (2) also diplomated and made Dr of the Canon Law,] and Henry Cole, LL. D. late Warden of New College, Visitors of the University, authorized by Cardinal POLE, commanding and desiring the Heads of Colleges and Halls to amend the grand negligence of the Scholars under their rule. This was the last matter, as it seems, that they did act in their Visitation, for this year also the said Ormanet, with Cuthbert Scot, Bishop of Chester, Thomas Watson, Bishop of Lincoln, John Christopherfon, Bishop of Chichester, and Henry Cole, Provost of Eton, lately Warden of New College, did visit Cambridge according to the direction of a Commission from the Cardinal the last year.

1558 Chanc. the said Cardinal POLE, but he dying Nov. 17, Dr. W. TRESHAM became Cancellarius natus, who, afterward in a Conv. Jan. 21, (3) pronounced the place of Chancellor void by the death of him the said Cardinal, did then make public to the Assembly, that the 24th of the said month a new Chancellor was to be elected according to the Statutes then read over. The time being come, and a dispensation then proposed, that a laical person might be chosen to the office of Chancellor, (after which were Nominators of his Electors designed by the Proctors according to the Statutes and laudable customs of the University, as 'tis expressed in the Register for this time) HENRY FITZALAN, EARL of ARUNDEL, High Steward of the University, was chosen by the Suffrages of all the Electors (whether per Instantes, or according to the Edwardine Statutes, it appears not) and the 6th of Feb. following a Codicil of his Election was sealed and sent to him. For which great favour so expressed, he sent a kind letter of thanks (4) dat. 24th of the said month.

Mr. (2) { Walter Bailey of New Coll. } Apr. 20.

The Junior proceeded Doctor of Physic May 21, 1563, being then Regius Professor of Medicine. (4) He died March 3, 1583, aged 63. See his Epitaph in New College Chapel.]

Queen Mary dying this year, a Convocation was celebrated the next (5) on the 1st of June, wherein that portion of her donation, which was yet undisposed, was distributed among certain Officers and Servants of the University, to be received by them yearly for ever. The other distribution was made soon after: She had endowed the University with several Rectories of Churches, which was an. 1553.

1559 Chanc. HENRY FITZALAN, Earl of ARUNDEL, &c. but he either from a foresight of some innovation that would suddenly happen in the University, or else some other cause, (whether upon any public or private offence I know not) began to entertain thoughts of quitting his office. The Academians understanding it, sent one of the Proctors to him with letters, (6) whereby he was desired in the name of the University to continue in his Chancellorship, and not deprive the destitute members thereof of his help, though according to his private opinion it might not, or would not succeed according to his wish. But, notwithstanding the said entreaties, and other ways whereby he was courted to continue in his office, he, on the 12th of June this year resigned, and on the 20th following (Dr. TRESHAM being in the mean time Cancel. natus) after a dispensation (7) was proposed for the electing of some noble Laic to the said office (which was granted, notwithstanding any Statute to the contrary) Sir JOHN MASON, Knight, one of the Queen's Privy Council, was elected Chancellor again, [the day following.]

This year, [July 6,] a certain sum of money amounting to 12l. 13s. 4d. which was owing to the University by Dr. TRESHAM, (as by his accompts appeared) was forgiven and remitted, (7) and the reason for it was because he had undergone the office of Commissary at least 20 years without any reward given to, or stipend decreed for, him; and also that by his great labour and pains, those great Benefactions were conferred on the University by Qu. Mary, (more than any Prince did before) as in my Annals may be fully seen. To this I must add, that by his endeavours in obtaining subsidies for learning, and Dr. RAYNOLDS his care in renewing the Schools, and doing other very beneficial offices, the University, which was almost brought to nothing, began to flourish, though they themselves could not see the continuance of it. For TRESHAM being this year deprived of his Canonry of Christ Church by the Queen's Commissioners, because he would not take the Oath of Supremacy, retired to his Rectory of Bugbrook in Northamptonshire (being now all the spirituality that was left him) where living obscurely, died within few years after. But the said Dr. BABYNGTON giving it up in the beginning of Michaelmas term, THOMAS WHYTE, [aforesaid,] LL. D. and Warden of New College, succeeded. (5)

Notwithstanding the junior Proctor (who stood in the Act Feb. 19, 1559) had lately left the Society of Mert. Coll. to prevent expulsion for what he had done in the proceedings concerning the admission of John Man to the Wardenship of the said College, (of which I have given you an account in the Annals 1562) yet, by his sorrow (1) expressed to the Archbishop of Canterbury for what he had done therein, he became one of the Lynaker Lecturers in that College, twice Proctor, as 'tis here said, and this year about All Souls day Fellow of All Souls College. At length he was Doctor of Physic, Head or Governor of the College of Physicians in London, and Physician to Queen Elizabeth.

1564 Chanc. the same, namely, Sir JOHN MASON, Knt. but he (by his letters this year dat. Dec. 26) resigning, (2) commended then to the Academians, who took his resignation very sorrowfully, the Earl of Leicester, and the Archb. of Canterbury, [Parker] to make choice of either of them to be their Chanc. Whereupon (the Commissaryship of Dr. WHYTE being also void, and Dr. HUMPHREY [President] of Magd. Coll. governing as Cancellarius natus) a Convocation declared by the senior Proctor was celebrated (3) the last of the said month for the election of a new Chancellor. In which, after the Doctors and Masters had proceeded according to the Statutes, ROBERT DUDLEY, ([fifth] son of John Duke of Northumberland) Earl of LEICESTER, Baron of DENBIGH, Master of the Horse, Knight of the most noble Order of the Garter, and of St. Michael [in France,] one of the Queen's Privy Council, and Master of Arts of this University, was elected Chancellor. He was also elected Steward of Cambridge Univesity 1562, on the death of the Lord Paget.

Commissary, JOHN KENNALL, LL. D. Canon of Christ Church, Residentiary of the Cathedral of Exeter, Chancellor of Rochester, and Archdeacon of the Diocese of Oxford, was chosen by Suffrages in a scrutiny on the last of Dec. (4)

The senior Proctor (chosen Probationer-Fellow of Magdalen College an. 1555, but soon after left it) was this year [Nov. 18, (6)] elected Orator of the University, being the first of all after that office was made standing or perpetual. [He was elected Provost of Oriel Coll. Mar. 3, 1564-5, made Canon of Christ Church 1565, admitted Doctor of Physic 1573, was Chief Physician to Queen Elizabeth, and died in 1605.] (7)

Note,

Note, that since this time, we never find in our Records any more mention of Cancellarius natus at the vacancy of any Chancellor, for he that was formerly Vicechancellor still continued in his place [ti]ll the time of the next succeeding Chancellor, as Dr. [HETON] did when HATTON was chosen an. 1588, and Dr. JAMES when SACKVILLE was elected an. 1591, notwithstanding the matter was then questioned by Lloyd, the junior Proctor, who took the said things that were done by him to be nullities, in regard that he still continued Vicechancellor after the Chancellor was dead.

Commiff. THOMAS COOPER, sometime Bach. of Physic, and School-master of Magd. Whereupon the Chancellor, having notice of it, commanded the Masters to proceed to another Election (Dr. Humphrey being in the mean time Commissarius natus) and a Convocation being called Mar. 27, it was decreed by them, that he that had most suffrages, should, though he had [not] attained to the major part of the whole number, be elected Commissary. Proctors { James Charnocke of Brasenose Coll. } elected Apr. 18,
Mr. (4) { Edmund Campion of St. John's Coll. } per instantes.

[This Edmund Campion, the junior Proctor, when Q. Elizabeth was entertained by the University in 1566, did not only make an eloquent oration before her at her first entry, but also was Respondent in the Philosophy Act in St. Mary's Church, performed by him with great applause from that Queen, and the learned auditory. The year after his Proctorship he went into Ireland, where he composed the History of that country, which was published in 1633 by Sir James Ware. But being discovered to have left the Church of England, and to labour for profelytes, he was imprisoned. In 1571, having made his escape, he came into his native country, where making but a short stay, he went and settled for a time in the English College at Doway, and became B. D. there. Thence he went to Rome, where he was admitted into the Society of Jesus in 1573, and was sent by that Order into divers Countries, and at last came with Father Persons into England in 1580, by the command of Pope Gregory XIII. But being soon taken, he was with other Romish Priests, found guilty of treason, &c. and was executed at Tyburn Dec. 1, 1581.] (5)

There was also one Edmund Campion that was Fellow of Trinity College an. 1563, supposed by some to be the same with him of St. John's, he then or sometime before translating himself to that House. But upon examination it cannot be, for he of St. John's proceeded M. A. an. 1564, [and Commiff. the same, [Dr. COOPER,] now Dean of Gloucester; but upon what account, whether by a new election of the Masters, or by the Chancellor's letters, his office was prorogued, it appears not.

What I have to observe of the office this year is, that the Chancellor by the great power he enjoyed (as being the only favourite at court) took upon him the right of nominating the Commissary, under pretence of the troublesome election of him last year, at which he took great offence: That also after the Election of such that were by him nominated, a Codicil thereof was to be sent to him: and lastly that the name of Commissary began now to be disused, and the word Vicechancellor brought into fashion, for the election of whom by scrutiny and suffrages, we have no Statute that I know of in our books before the time of King Edward VI.

Proctors { John Bereblock of Exeter Coll. } elected
Mr. (1) { Thomas Bodley of Merton Coll. } Apr. 20.

How ancient the custom was for choosing Proctors per Instantes I find not. However the way was thus. At the resignation of their offices, were two Scrutators, called Procuratores nati, appointed. These for the election to come, designed by scrutiny two Regent Masters ad placitum for Instantes. That being done, the Instantes constituted six other Masters to be Electors of the new Proctors. Which six Electors with the Commissary or Vicechancellor did name the new Proctors for the year to follow, and after nomination were pronounced elected by the Scrutators. Which way, having been the year going before, Nov. 2, taken away (2) at the request and command of the Chancellor, these Proctors for this year were elected by the suffrages of the Masters in a scrutiny, and no otherwise.

As for the senior Proctor he was first Fellow [and Master of Arts] of St. John's College, which place he leaving was made Fellow of Exeter College, and became very skilful in the art of delineating, and drawing the descriptions of places, of which some are extant, particularly that of the City of Rochester; [at which place, or near it, he was born.] (3)

The other Proctor being so well known to us already, 'twill be needless to make any more mention than what I have already done in this work.

(3) As for the senior Proctor he was one of a robust body and courageous spirit, and defended his office as well by force of arms as authority. In vindicating also the liberties of Northgate hundred and the Parish of St. Clements (both joining to Oxford) arose great controversies between him and George Brome, Esq. (4) lord of those places, (the first of which he held of the Crown) and continuing a considerable time to the great trouble and vexation of the said Brome, did at length, to spite the University, who abetted Crayne in his proceedings, sell the said hundred to the City, supposing thereby that the Citizens would be better able than he to manage and carry on any quarrel that should happen hereafter about liberties therein. In the year before or else this, the said Crayne with his brother Proctor, walking in the night time in St. Thomas Parish, took a certain person in the act of adultery; to quit the punishment of which, he was forced by them (as I have heard) to repair that wooden bridge (then ready to fall) that leads from St. Thomas Parish into the Castle, that is to say, that bridge at the Castle-mill head.

The Junior was born at London, entered a Student into University Coll. in the 19th year of his age 1574. Six years after he became Fellow of All Souls Coll. and being M. A. and in holy Orders was admitted Reader of Divinity in Magdalen College. Afterwards he became Canon Residentiary of Hereford, Chaplain to the Queen, [Rector of Pembridge in Herefordshire,] Dean of Windsor [1602, being then D.D. Registrary of the Order of the Garter,] and at length Bishop of Gloucester. He died Jun. 14, 1612, [æt. 59,] and was buried in St. George's Chapel in the Castle at Windsor.

1587 Chanc. the said ROBERT Earl of LEICESTER.

Vicechanc. FRANCIS WYLLIS, (1) Master of Arts, President of St. John's Coll. and Dean of Worcester, constituted by the Chancellor now in England, July 17, [on which day he was admitted] Doctor of Divinity.

1588 Chanc. the said ROBERT Earl of LEICESTER, who dying the 4th of September, [at Cornbury Park in Oxfordshire, having been taken ill as he was upon his journey to his Castle at Kenilworth,] Sir CHRISTOPHER HATTON (sometime of St. Mary's Hall) Knight of the Garter, and Lord High Chancellor of England, was by the major part of the Academians (3) elected into his place 20th of the said month. In which vacancy and election there was no Cancellarius natus as formerly, but only the Vicechancellor underneath mentioned, who before had been designed by the Earl of LEICESTER. It is to be noted, that at the election of HATTON, Robert Earl of Essex, that popular and ambitious person, was his competitor, [who had been incorporated M. A. Apr. 11 preceding, (4)] thinking that if he might have carried it, he would be as powerful among the Gownsmen as among the Gentlemen of the Sword, but he being generally looked upon as a great patron of the Puritan faction, and consequently that if he had obtained it he might do as much mischief in his office as the Earl of Leicester had done before, he was therefore, and especially upon the commendation to the University of HATTON, by Whitgift, Archbp of Canterbury, laid aside.

Vicechanc. MARTIN HETON, D. D. (1) Canon of Christ Church, July 10. As for this worthy person, I find that he was born at London; that he was the son of George Heton, Merchant, (one in his time of great piety and hospitality) which George while he lived at Antwerpe, where he was Master of the English Merchants, caused his house to be free and open for those that fled for religion sake in the reign of Qu. Mary. At his return into England he became Chamberlain of London, and giving this his son that education which was fitting to his birth, sent him at length to Westminster School, where tarrying till 1571, was with Richard Eedes chosen Student of Christ Church. Three years after (1574) he became Bach. of Arts, and in 1578 Master in the same faculty, being then accounted an acute disputant in Philosophy. Afterward applying himself to the study of Divinity became a very noted Preacher in the University. At length, after he had spent some years in his Canonry of Christ Church, he became Dean of Winchester after the decease of Dr. Humphry, and Bishop of Ely after the death of Dr. Cox, [that see having laid void 20 years.]

Proctors { Thomas Ravys of Ch. Ch. } elect. Apr. 17, in a Cong.
Mr. (2) { Matthew Gwynne of St. John's Coll. } of Reg. and Non Reg.

The Senior was afterward Dean of Christ Church, and at length Bishop of London. The other Dr. of Physic, and a noted writer in his time. [He was Physician to the Tower of London, the first Medicine Professor of Gresham College, and one of the College of Physicians.] (3)

1589 Chanc. [the same,] Sir CHRISTOPHER HATTON, Knt. who by the death of ROBERT DUDLEY Earl of LEICESTER, became also High Steward of the University of Cambridge.

Mr. (1) { John Evelegh of Exeter Coll. } Apr. 29.

1591 Chanc. [the same,] Sir CHRISTOPHER HATTON, [Knight,] who dying Nov. 20, the thoughts of the Academians were much disturbed concerning a Successor. Some, especially those of the Puritan faction, were for Robert D'Evereux Earl of Essex, before mentioned, now in great favour with the Queen; others for THOMAS SACKVILE, Baron of BUCKHURST. At length a contention arising about it, the Academians, after they had received a letter from the Queen in favour of BUCKHURST, chose him (2) the 17 Dec. following, and soon after sent a Codicil (3) of his election to him. But that which I shall observe, that caused the contention to be very hot, was Dr. JAMES his denial of delivering up his office of Vicechancellorship in the time of the vacancy of the Chancellorship, according to the ancient manner. For so it was that the Commissary, upon the resignation or death of the Chancellor, resigned the Insignia into the hands of the Proctors, and they into the hands of the Cancellarius natus, that is, the senior Theologist in the University. But now Dr. JAMES denying so to do, the junior Proctor Mr. Lloyd would not be present at Congregations, especially that held Dec. 2: (4) for then divers being to be admitted to their degrees, he came into the House and protested against the matters then to be done. After which he departed, and would act no more 'till either a Chancellor was elected, or else that a Cancellarius natus should take place. In the mean time the Vicechanc. appointed Mr. John Tewer in his place for that time by giving him the Procuratorial oath.

Vicechanc. Dr. JAMES again, Jul. 16, (5) designed by Chancellor HATTON. [He was Dean of Durham in 1596, and at length Bp of the same Church.]

L. 1590, and supplicated to be admitted Dr of that Faculty, but whether admitted, it appears not; (6)] he received the honour of Knighthood from King James at Richmond, June 28, 1607. About which time he was sent by him Ambassador to Holland, and at length was made Prime Secretary of State. In which office he died Oct. 27, an. 1617, after he had enjoyed it three years and at least five months.

Proctors { Robert Williamson of Magd. Coll. }
 Mr. (1) { Robert Lloyd of Jesus Coll. } Jun. 137

Which Proctors were named by the King, as I have elsewhere told you. For certain new Ordinations (2) being transmitted to the University by the Chancellor in the month of April for the election of the Proctors, the Academicians could not after their usual way meet together for the election of them, many Parsons and Curates having already resorted from several parts of the nation, nay, some from Wales, to elect Lloyd. Whereupon no small tumult arising in the University, the election of new Proctors was prorogued 'till such time that the controversies in the University were equally composed. At length, after all parties were satisfied, it was reputed unlawful for the Masters to nominate any to the Procuratorial Office but the afore-said Candidates Williamson and Lloyd. Which being the sentence of the King and Chancellor, that ancient custom of choosing Proctors by suffrages in a scrutiny vanished, and another new form of election was introduced, as I am now about to shew.

In which year, for the succession of the Procuratorial Office without public canvassing, (as the word now was) it pleased the King's Majesty to convert the said Elections into private and domestic. Also that the said office might be equally distributed through every College, according to an arithmetical proportion, a Cycle of 23 years was made; (4) which, while it revolves, sheweth how each College (from whence the Proctors are yearly to be taken) is to join till the year 1720, and after, and how many courses each hath therein. Which Cycle being remitted into the Statutes by the King's authority, afterward published in a sheet of paper, with such Statutes that belong thereunto, those factious elections by canvassing, or public solicitations for suffrages, which oftentimes proved pernicious to the University, were now (not too late) expired. The first Proctors of the said Cycle, called by some the Caroline Cycle (chiefly composed by Peter Turner [M. A. afterward Dr of Physic, Fellow] of Merton Coll. [Professor of Geometry in Gresham College, London, and Savilian Professor of Geometry here,] and Robert Hegge, [Fellow] of Corpus Christi Coll.) were these:

The other Proctor was afterward [D. D.] Dean of [Dromore] in Ireland, and there died.

1641 Chanc. the same, viz. Dr. WILLIAM LAUD, Archbishop of Canterbury, but he being accused of divers capital crimes in both Houses of Parliament, and thereupon committed first to private custody, then to the Tower of London, made a resignation on the 22d of June of all authority and academical administration belonging to him in the University. Which resignation under his hand and seal, he sent with his letter of the 25th of the said month to Oxford, giving therein very great tokens in a lamenting manner of his love and affection to the University. Both which being received, were, after a new Chancellor had been elected, answered with great affection and piety. The first of July following, the said resignation being published in Convocation, PHILIP HERBERT, Earl of PEMBROKE and MONTGOMERY, [Baron Herbert of Shurland, High] Steward of the University, [Knight of the Garter, Chamberlain of his Majesty's Household, and one of his Privy Council] was then elected Chanc. and the 8th day of the said month was installed in London in his house called Baynard's Castle. But now Hierarchy daily declining, and Bishops not only ejected from the number of Peers in Parliament, but also divers ecclesiastical persons deprived of acting in secular affairs as alien from their profession, this our worthy Vicechancellor, both a spiritual and temporal Judge, next to the Chancellor, in Academical causes, being thereupon thought not fit (at least with safety) to execute his office, the Chancellor by his letters, dated March 2 this year, appointed a laical person GILES SWEIT, LL. D. his Commissary or Deputy to supply his turn in the Courts and civil affairs of the University. Which office, though it was for some time performed by him (such were the times that required it) yet the like example we never before or since had.

This year that solemnity which should have been performed by the Citizens of Oxford Feb. 10. (St. Scholastica's day) in St. Mary's Church, (on which day the great Conflict began an. 1354) was by them, partly out of contempt, and because the rebellious Parliament favoured them, omitted.

1642 Chanc. [the same,] PHILIP, Earl of PEMBROKE, &c. sometime of New College; [created M. A. in 1605.]

Vicechanc. &c. The year of the Vicechancellorship of Dr. PRIDEAUX, Bishop of Worcester, being ended, and he about the feast of St. John Baptist not only quitting all right therein (without laying down the ensigns of his office, as the manner is) but rather leaving the University abruptly, as the advantage of time offered, the office for some time laid void, and nothing of it was done but by Deputies. The which, for what reason it so happened, is perhaps at this time too great a trouble for me to tell. For now the University, the mother of togated peace, being affrighted with the unwonted rumours of a civil war, the Muses deserted, and the adorers of them every where dispersed, knew not (as if put between the anvil and the hammer) which way to turn itself, or seek rest. The administration therefore of its government, was successively, according to the manner of our predecessors, committed to Deputies, of whom the first was Dr. ROBERT PINCKE, Warden of New College, who for his loyalty in raising and settling the University Militia for the defence of it from the common incursions of the enemy, and for endeavouring to make the City provide also men and arms for its defence, the Citizens being very backward in it, was afterward treacherously

(1) [Abraham Woodhead, after quitting his office (not without trouble, occasioned by the denying the Grace of Francis Cheynell, of which he complained to the Long Parliament) attended several young Gentlemen of his College on their travels. And settling for a time at Rome, he was entertained by George Duke of Buckingham, whom he instructed in Mathematics. After his return (being deprived of his Fellowship by the Visitors appointed by the Parliament for absence and non-appearance an. 1648) he lived for some time in York House in the Strand near London, by the appointment of the said Duke; but Arthur Lord Capell being informed of the great merits of the person, he entertained and learned of him the Mathematical sciences. In 1660 he was restored to his Fellowship by his Majesty's Commissioners, and remained in his College for a time: But his opinion as to Religion being then altered (as it had been since he was at Rome, which he always very warily concealed) got leave of the Master and Society to be absent, as intending again to travel, with the allowance of 20l. per an. So that retiring to London, he afterwards settled at Hoxton, alias Hogsdon, near to that city, where he lived very obscurely and retiredly upon that allowance that the College made to him as a Traveller, all therein, except one, knowing not to the contrary, but that he was beyond the seas. And there being settled, he not only caused youths to be trained up in the Roman Catholic Religion (of which certain Members of Parliament did openly make mention in the House, after the Popish Plot was discovered) but also wrote and published divers books in vindication of the Church of Rome. In this his retirement, he died at Hogsdon in 1678, aged 70. ATH. OXON. II, 613.]

Wherefore they calling a Convocation, Oct. 24, elected (5) for their Chancellor one that had been formerly of Magdalen College, viz. At which time Mr. James Farren of the same College (who had been elected by the Masters of that House) was admitted into his place, (2) but not without the consent of the Committee for regulating the University, which was obtained the 15th of the same month. 1647 Chanc. the same, viz. According to which order he went in the beginning of the next year, as I shall forthwith tell you.

Vicechanc. Dr. FELL, without any nomination by the Chancellor. So that being discharged of his office by Order from the Visitors (5) Oct. 8, because as they pretended he was neither nominated, nor lawfully admitted thereunto, yet, he taking no notice of it, supplied the place sometimes in his own person, and sometimes by Deputies.

Vicechanc. He was just before declared D. of D. by another Order.

Mr. (4) { Ralph Button of Mert. Coll. } Apr. 12.

Which Proctors were designed and admitted to their office by the same authority that the Vicechancellor was, without any regard had to the Caroline Cycle, which appointed New Coll. and All Souls to elect Proctors for this year: [and William Bew, or Beaw, Fell. of New Coll. (afterward Vic. of Adderbury in Oxfordshire, and at length Bishop of Landaff) who had been chosen by the Society of New College, for their Proctor on the first Wednesday in Lent 1647-8, was put aside, as also one Ed. Allason, who (as 'tis said in the Visitors' Register) was chosen by those of All Souls College, yet whether he was of that House, or had taken the Degree of Master of Arts, I cannot yet find.] (5)

[The Senior was elected, by Order of the Visitors, Reader of the Natural Philosophy Lecture in the place of John Edwards, D. of Physic, and Fell. of St. John's Coll. ejected thence. (6) He was also appointed Fellow of Magd. Coll. and created D. C. L. in 1650. Soon after he left his Fellowship, because he took to him a wife, but keeping his Reader's place till his Majesty's return, was then discharged of it by the Commissioners. He died in his house near Magd. Coll. May 9, 1676, aged 62 years, and was buried in the North Aile joining to the Chancel of the Church of St. Peter in the East, within the City of Oxford. (7)]

The Junior Proctor, while he bore that office, was made Canon of Christ Ch. and Orator of the University, upon the refusal of Edward Corbet, in the place of Dr. Henry Hammond, who had been ejected by the Parliament Visitors. After his Majesty's Restoration he was discharged of his Canonry and Oratorship, and retired to Islington near London, where he preached in Conventicles, and taught youths to the time of his death; which happening in the latter end of Oct. 1680, he was buried in the Church there. But the last of the said Colleges being not in a capacity of yielding a person zealous and suitable to these times, All Souls therefore did (by recommendations of the Committee and Visitors) choose one that had been an officer in the Parliament Army, and lately put in Fellow thereof. [He was afterward Commander in Chief of the Parliament forces in the county of Tipperary in Ireland, knighted by the favour of Henry Cromwell, and chosen Burgess for Woodstock in Oxfordshire in 1658. He died in Ireland, about the latter end of K. Charles II.] (3)

Which office (after he had been acquainted what the University had done by certain Doctors and Masters sent to him, then at Edinburgh in Scotland) he kindly accepted, and forthwith promised to be a friend to the University, by his canting letter sent thereunto, (7) dated at that place, Feb. 4, part of which runs thus: 'But if these prevail not,' (meaning some exceptions for the refusal of the office) 'and that I must continue this honour, until I can personally serve you, you shall not want my prayers, That that seed and stock of piety and learning (so marvellously springing up amongst you) may be useful to that great and glorious kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, of the approach of which, so plentiful an effusion of the Spirit upon these hopeful plants is one of the Vicechanc. DANIEL GREENWOOD, D. D. Principal of Brasenose College, admitted (2) October 12, having been on the 12th of Sept. going before, nominated and designed to that office by the Committee for the reformation of the University, the Chancellorship being then void.

Mr. (3) { Philip Stephens of New Coll.

It was ordered (4) in the beginning of this year [Mar. 13, 1649-50,] by the Visitors, with the consent of the Members of Queen's and Lincoln Coll. that Mr. Owen, Fellow of Lincoln Coll. be elected and appointed to be Proctor for the said year, and that Queen's Coll. should be enabled by the said Order to nominate and elect a Proctor the very next time it comes to Lincoln College turn, to elect according to the Cycle.

[The Senior in 1650 was appointed President of St. John's Coll. by the Committee for the reformation of the University; and was a noted Politician for carrying on the independent interest in the University. In 1660 he was forced to leave his beloved Presidentship to make room for the right owner Dr. Richard Baylie, who for 12 years going before had suffered much for his loyalty: so that retiring to London he took up his quarters at length in Hatton Garden, and was not wanting to carry on the Congregational way upon all occasions. He died in 1681. (5)]

The Junior, sometime of St. Albans' Hall, being now Fellow of New College by favour of the Visitors, was appointed Principal of Hart Hall by the same authority in 1653. He proceeded Dr. of Physic 1656, was ejected 1660, and died in London.] (6)

 Mr. (1) { Samuel Lee of Wadham Coll. } Apr. 9.

Which Proctors were, as 'twas by all the new comers supposed, elected according to the Caroline Cycle, but much mistaken; for whereas the time of admission is according to the Cycle most just, being in the beginning of every year, the present Academians thought that the election of them was right. Which election, according to the Statutes is to be in each College that is to have a Proctor, on the Wednesday next after the first Sunday in Lent, which is towards the latter end of the year according to the English account. By which mistake (notwithstanding the Colleges here mentioned were ordered by the Visitors (mistaken also) to choose Proctors) the Cycle which was altogether interrupted from the year 1648 to this, was kept back an year, and so continued till 1662.

The Junior not being of sufficient standing in the degree of Master, at which time he was elected Proctor by the Society of his Coll. the Visitors dispensed with it (2) by their Order dated March 22, 1650. [He had been entered a Commoner of Magd. Hall, (having received some academical education elsewhere) about the latter end of 1647, in expectation of a Fellowship from the Parliamentary Visitors, then about to sit in Oxon, under pretence of reforming the University. On the 14th of Apr. 1648 he was actually created M. A. in the Pembrokeian Creation then made; about which time he was recommended by the Committee (sitting in Westminster) to the said Visitors for a Fellowship of All Souls Coll. but the Fellowships of that College having been supplied by them, they settled him in a Fellowship of Wadham Coll. Oct. 3 the same year. He became a frequent Preacher in and near Oxon, without any Orders from a Bishop, and was preferred by Oliver to the Ministry of St. Botolph's Church near Bishopsgate in London, but ejected thence by the Rump Parliament. At length he became Lecturer of Great St. Helen's Church in London. After the Restoration he was not silenced for Nonconformity, because he had no Preferment to lose, but lived on an estate of inheritance in Bicester, Oxfordshire, where he sometimes kept Conventicles. In 1678 he removed to Newington Green near London, and in 1686 he went with his family to New England. But in the reign of K. Will. III, returning to Old England, they were taken by a French Privateer near their journey's end, Nov. 1691: and being all conveyed to St. Maloes, this S. Lee was so overwhelmed with grief for his captivity and loss of his money and goods, that he died in a manner heart-broken.] (3)

But the Vicechancellor and Heads of Houses, being then and before inclined to reform it, and set it aright, Ch. Church and Brasenose chose also, [according to the true tenor of the Cycle:] So that from thence a controversy arising, it was on the 22d of March the last year decided at London in the Chancellor's house, by him the said Chancellor and the Bishops of London and Worcester, [viz. Sheldon and Morley,] that the Proctors chosen by Christ Church and Brasenose should stand and be admitted. THE STEWARDSHIP
UNIVERSITY.

THE Office of STEWARD in this University concerning the capital and chief causes of Scholars and privileged persons, King Henry IV, by his letters (1) patent dated June 2, an. reg. 7, Dom. 1405, did institute. Of which grant and office I shall observe

First, that because of the great malice of the Burghers and Laicks of Oxford, by their unjust indicting the right and true use of the Franchises and Privileges of the University (of which the Scholars made grievous complaints to the King, in an Epistle to him, (2) which I have seen) did therefore make a Grant to the Chancellor and Scholars thereof, that they might have a Steward of their own, by whom they should be tried, &c. and that at the demand of the Chancellor, all Justices and other Ministers of Government should deliver them up to him sub poenâ 200 lib.

Secondly, that for the revoking of the said Let. Pat. and Office which the Scholars obtained, several petitions were made to the Parliament, scil. one by the Commonalty (3) of England, 9 Oct. 9 Hen. IV, when the then Representatives of the Nation began to sit at Gloucester. Upon the reading of which the matter was referred to the King's Council, to hear the reasons given in by each party either pro or con; and in the mean time the said Let. Pat. or Charter was suspended till the next Session of Parliament: Another, when the Members met at Westminster 15 days before that of St. Hilary, 11 Hen. IV. Upon which the Chancellor of the University was by several breves cited to appear before the King's Council, and being at length referred to them for the decision of the matter, were several debates made either for lessening or nulling the privilege. Two more petitions also in French, of which one (1) was put up in the said year by the Gentry of Oxfordshire and Berkshire, and another the 13th by the Mayor and Burghers of Oxford (2) to the King. Notwithstanding all which the business was so brought to pass, that the University and their friends did then take care that nothing of the said privilege should be lessened but rather confirmed, as they did in the reigns of succeeding Kings.

Thirdly, that though the Steward had and hath cognizance of some causes which doth exceed the cognizance of the Chancellor of the University, yet he is to be nominated by no other person than by the said Chancellor, and confirmed by no other than the Convocation.

Fourthly, that the Steward had at first for his yearly pension but 4 marks, arising from the perquisites of Court leets kept by him or his Deputies, not reckoning those things that issue from the assize of bread and ale; but since, in the time of JOHN RUSSEL, Earl of BEDFORD, the Stipend was assigned to be 5 lib. yearly, to be paid out of the University stock.

Fifthly, that the said Steward, after his nomination and confirmation, was wont to receive his oath from the Chancellor in a solemn Congregation of Regents, as JOHN NORRYS, (3) and some of his successors did. But since, the Oath is taken before some appointed by the University to give it where-soever the Steward is, without the ceremony of a Congregation or Convocation. The Catalogue of them, as many as I can yet find, take, as it follows, for the first and second appear not; so imperfect are our Registers in the time of Henry IV and V.

JOHN NORRYS, Esquire of the Body to K. Henry VI, became Steward of the Liberties of the University of Oxford, for term of life, by the Letters pat. (4) of the Chancellor thereof, Mr. GILBERT KYMER, dated Mar. 4, 31 Hen. VI, Dom. 1452, confirmed by the University May 6 following. He was also confirmed in his Office by the Honourable Mr. GEORGE NEVYL, Chancellor of the University, and obtained confirmatory Letters from King Henry VI (5) for him and his successors in the said office, dated Feb. 15, in the 33d year of his reign, Dom. 1454. [He was also Master of the Wardrobe to King Hen. VI; Sheriff of the Counties of Oxford and Berks in the 36th of his reign; Esquire of the Body to K. Edward IV: And residing at Yatenden, Berks, departed this life 1 Sept. 6 E. IV. (1466;) whereupon he was buried at Bray, in an aisle of that church, built at his own cost. (6)]

His or his successor's Deputy or Under Steward was Sir RICHARD WYDEVYLL, (3) Knight, the Son I suppose of Richard, Earl Rivers, and Brother to Lionel Wydevill, Bishop of Salisbury, Chancellor of the University.

JASPER [TUDOR,] de Hatfield, [Half-Brother to K. Henry VI; Earl of PEMBROKE; Knight of the Garter,] Duke of BEDFORD, Uncle to K. Hen. VII, seems from our Registers to have been Steward about 1485. To whom, or else his Predecessor, was that Letter of the University written; (4) wherein they stile him the high and mighty Prince, their special good Lord and Steward. [He was constituted by K. Hen. VII, Lord High Steward, at the Coronation of his Queen, Elizabeth of York, Nov. 10, 1487; Lord Lieutenant of Ireland 1488, and Earl Marshal of England 1489. [In 1532 he resigned the Chancellorship, by delivering up the Great Seal, and was afterward committed to the Tower for not acknowledging the King's Supremacy over the Church of England, the Succession of the Crown from Anne Bulleyn, &c. and was beheaded for the same in 1535. [Our Author says this Henry Norrys was 'afterward Baron Norris of Rycot.' But he seems to have mistaken the son for the father. The son was only 14 years old when the Earl of Southampton, the High Steward, died, in 1542. It is therefore more probable that Henry Norris, the father, was Under Steward; who 'was Esquire of the Body to K. Hen. VIII, and in 1526 was made Usher of the Black Rod; one of the Gentlemen of his Majesty's Privy Chamber 1528; and Constable of Wallingford Castle 1535. In 1536, May 1, at a solemn Just held at Greenwich, wherein George Bullen, Viscount Rochford, brother to Q. Anne Bullen, was the chief Challenger, and this Henry Norris principal Defendant; the King, being displeased at something that happened, suddenly departed thence. The next morning the Viscount and H. Norris were committed to the Tower, and also the Queen with several others, and were all beheaded soon after. His son, H. Norris was knighted at his own house at Rycot, by Q. Elizabeth in 1566, and sent Ambassador into France 1571: where he managed his business with such prudence and honour, as that by reason thereof, and his father's sufferings (for her mother's sake) the Queen advanced him to the dignity of a Peer of the Realm by the title of Baron Norris of Rycot in Oxfordshire. Edw. VI; afterward] Earl of BEDFORD, succeeded (1) upon the death of the former Steward Nov. 7, 1542. [In 1553 he was made Lord Privy Seal by Q. Mary, died 1555, and was buried at Chenys in Bucks.]

His Under Steward or Deputy was JOHN YATES, Esq. against whom the Burghers of Oxford shut their Guildhall door, when he came to execute his Office in the business of Anthony Garnet, Scholar of Balliol College, guilty of felony.

HENRY FITZ ALAN, Earl of ARUNDELL, Baron MALTRAVERS, Clun, &c. succeeded (2) upon the death of the former Steward, Mar. 30, 1555. Afterward Chancellor of the University [in 1559. Elizabeth, and Lord High Steward of England for the day on which she was crowned; Lord Steward of their Households; and Lord President of their Councils. He died Feb. 25, 1579, aged 68. (3)]

JOHN LUMLEY, Baron of LUMLEY, [Knight of the Bath,] son in law to the former Steward, succeeded (4) Feb. 24, 1558-9, by the nomination of his said father.

His Deputies were Mr. WILLIAM STANDISH, [Register of the University,] and Mr. RICHARD CULLEN, of Magdalen College.

“ RICHARD, King of the ROMANS, after his long paralytic illneſs, died Apr. 2, 1272, (56 Hen. III) at Berkhamſted, his heart was preſerved in the Frier Minors' Church at Oxford, and his body interred in his own Ciſtertian Abbey of Hales. He had been ſo great a Patron of WALTER de MERTON, that this munificent Prelate an. 1274, founded his College in Oxford, ‘ Pro ſalute animarum Henrici quondam Regis Angliæ, nec non Germani ſui Ricardi Romanorum Regis inclyti et hæredum ſuorum.’ (1)

Worceſter College, Oxford, 1726, was elected Fellow of this Society 1735 ; ſoon after which he took the degree of Bachelor of Phyſic, and removed to the city of Worceſter to practice in that profeſſion. He proceeded D. M. in 1759, and continued eminent in practice till his laſt illneſs. He died at Bath of a lingering diſorder Jun. 27, 1776, and is buried in the Abbey church. His amuſe-ment was the ſtudy of the polite arts, particularly painting, and that branch of it which beſt beſits a gentleman, the deſigning hiſtorical pictures, in which he ſo far excelled, that it has been ſaid of him, that if he had not been one of the beſt phyſicians, he would have been the beſt painter of the age. About 1425 five bells were put up in the Tower, Dr. Henry Abendon being then Warden. The tenor or great bell (on which the name of the said Abendon was put) was supposed to be the best bell in England, being, as 'twas said, of fine metal silver sound.

In 1657 these five bells were cast into eight by Michael Derby; towards which A. W. his mother, and his two brothers, Rob. and Christopher Wood gave 5*l*. And in 1681 they were re-cast by Christopher Hudson of London. (1)

'JOHN MARSHALL, [Fellow,] occurs Principal of Colcell or Colehill Hall, in St. John Bapt. Parish, Ox. 1447: Proctor of the Univ. under the title of Procurator borealis, an. 1455, Fellow of Eaton Coll. Preb. of York, Dr. of Div. Canon or Preb. of Windsor 1474, which Canonry he resigned 1477, and soon after [1478] became Bishop of Landaff. In 1491 he gave 20*l*. for the painting of the stalls in this (Merton) Coll. choir, and two books to the Library. In 1492 was finished, at this Bishop's charge, a new and fair stone cross in St. Frideswyde's churchyard, in the place, or near it, of one anciently standing there (which churchyard was afterwards converted into two or more gardens belonging to the Dean and two Canons of Christ Ch.) and the first person that preached in the pulpit at the said cross (which was on Ascension day 1492) was Mr. Rich. Rawlins, Fellow of [this] Merton Coll. In 1496

(1) A. Wood's LIFE, pp. 95, 98, and 294.

he bequeathed to the College 20*l.* in Angels for the ceiling of the choir with boards, 8 books to the Library, and a standing gilt cup or bole, all received March 3, the same year. In 1497 the ceiling of the said choir was finished, which cost 90*l.* and about the same time the painting of the back part of the stalls in the choir. Every division or stall had the effigies from head to foot, with antique habits, and antique coverings for the head, of a greater or lesser Prophet, or Apostle, or some Saint: each having a scroll coming out of their mouths, winding over their heads, containing a sentence from the Belief, Pater noster, &c. till all was done, even to Amen. All these pictures were daubed out as I have heard temp. E. VI, but soon after appeared again. In the time of Oliver Protector they were daubed out again, but soon after appeared. At length in 1659 oil colours were laid upon them, and then they were quite lost. In 167—, when these old stalls were plucked down, being very substantial, and of heart of oak not at all perished, and new ones placed at the charge of Mr. Fisher; they were removed into the outward chapel, where they yet continue. In the last stall (or rather part of one) next of all to the vestry door, and in that opposite to it, was painted to the life the effigies kneeling of the said Bishop Marshall, habited in his pontificalia, and mitred, with his crozier leaning on his right shoulder, and this inscription under each picture:

Orate pro a'i'a D. Jo'his Marshall ep'i Landavenfis, cujus a'i'æ propitiatur Deus. Amen.

When these stalls were pulled down, Mr. N. Wight did at my desire put one of these boards whereon the picture was painted in the College Library, and hung it against the wall over the stairs; where continuing till 1683, at what time scaffolds were set up to paint and gild the roof of the said Library, it was by the workmen used, and at length by one of them conveyed away. Bishop Marshall died 1496—buried in the Church of Landaff.

"It appears by a French Copy of this Petition now extant in the Schools Tower, that Mr. Twyne, or the University itself, procured one in 1622 out of the Bundle of Petitions of Parliament in 7 Edw. III. This is testified by two Clerks or Keepers of those Records, Aug. Vincent and Geo. Robinson. Now Mr. Wood in his History does very truly observe, that there was no Parliament held at all that year, and therefore he has placed it under 7 R. II. But in this he is mistaken; for though there was a parliament held that year, yet it will manifestly appear, that this Petition could not be presented so soon; but in all likelihood the 11th of his reign, which begun Feb. 3, 1387; for all his Writs relating to this petition are dated in that year, or the following 1388." An Account of purchases made with WILL. of DURHAM's money.

"The first purchase that occurs out of the original deeds, all lodged in this College Treasury, is that of an angular, or corner House, standing in Schoolstreet, and is now part of the front of Brasenose College, which was bought of the Prior and Brethren of the Hospital of Brackley; who grant it, and four shillings quit-rent out of another house, to the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Oxon, for which the Prior and his Brethren received thirty six marks in Gersumam; that is, into their purse. There are a great many witnesses to this deed, but the date is not added, nor was much used before the middle or end of Henry the Third's reign; yet it happens, that this want is supplied by a letter of Attorney to give possession, dated the thursday after Midsummer day, an. mcc quinquagesimo tertio, in words, and not in figures."

"The second deed is the purchase of a House from the Priory of Shireburn, made to the Chancellor, Proctors, and University of Oxon, and was situated

situated the first house in Highstreet, on the North side in St. Peter's in the east, and stands opposite to the front of the present College; with this also was conveyed 8s. quit-rent in St. Mary's parish, now enclosed in All Souls College: there was some quit rent due out of it, and in order to its sale, the Abbot and Convent of Eynesham did quit their claim an. 1255, and it was granted to the University, as appears by the officers of the Town, the same year, and for which the University paid forty eight marks in Gersumam."

"These two purchases being over, shortly after was held the great Council at Oxford, for reformation of Henry the Third's government; at which time, or shortly after, the University had lent some part of this money, left by William of Durham, to the Peers, or great men of the land: However about the year 1262, they made a third purchase from Simon of Balinden, a Canon of Litchfield, on the south side of their first corner house in Schoolstreet: Whatever name it had then, 'tis certain it was called Brasenose Hall shortly after, in the survey 7 Edward I, an. 1279; it cost 55*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* sterling, and makes, with the former house, the whole front of that College, and had four Schools belonging to it."

"The last purchase made, whilst the money continued in the hands of the University, was in the year 1270: for the then Chancellor, Thomas Beck, gave to one Wymond de Linge, Draper, and his wife Agnes, for a quit-rent of 15*s.* out of two houses standing now west of the Angel Inn in St. Peter's parish, seven pounds."

"By consulting the Inquisition, 7 Edw. I, an. 1279, it will appear, that putting all the prices here mentioned together, the sum will amount to 118*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and putting all the rents together, mentioned in that survey, the sum will be 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*" (1)

P. 42, l. 17—add

"As to where the College or Hall was first placed, it must in some measure proceed upon probabilities, but yet of that nature, that there will be but few that will not readily assent to the reasons that shall be given; which are these, that they were placed in that Hall, which the first of all others was called University Hall, and now makes part of Brasenose College; the reason is this, because these Scholars being become owners of three Halls, viz. University Hall, Brasenose Hall, and Drogeda or Drowda Hall, it is likely they would rather chuse to live in one of their own houses, than in a Hall hired of the Townsmen; and there is no likelihood that they pitched on Brasenose Hall, for it was then let at such an high rent, that it would have

(1) Smith, ut supra, p. 9, &c.

funke more than two of their salaries; and as to their other Hall, called Drow-day Hall, that was also of too high a rent for them; and upon this account they were most likely placed in the least of these three Halls; a second reason is, that probably they were called University Scholars for their living in University Hall; but thirdly, and more especially from the provision that obliged them to live altogether, and the Delegates had provided also, that none should turn them out, or make any Schools of their houses, without their own consent." "An account of the purchases made with WILLIAM of DURHAM's money, after the remainder of it was transferred into the hands of the Society (an. 1280) to be managed by them in buying additional estates to those the University had before purchased for them.

An. 1307, July 2. Two Houses that formerly belonged to Wymond the Linen Draper, lying in St. Peter's Parish. These houses are still in possession of the College.

An. 1307, July 25. A house lying in Sckydiard (now called St. Mary lane) in St. Mary's parish, bought of William Leyghton, Vicar of Goddington. It was called St. Edward's Hall, and sold to Oriel College for ever, under a quit-rent, 1486. The same person also passed at the same time another house in St. Peter's, called then, or shortly after, Maiden Hall. In 1388 it was sold to Bishop Wickham, and now makes part of the South side of New College Cloister.

An. 1311. The fourth purchase was bought of Tho. Sow, and consisted of one house and a yard in St. Peter's in the east, and lay on the south side of New College Lane, and is now enclosed into Queen's College. This house was sold May 19, 1340, D'no Roberto de Eglesfield, Founder of Queen's.

An. 1332, June 22. The fifth purchase was that of Spicer's Hall, bought of the heirs of Adam Feteplace, by William Nadale, and Robert Patering-ton, where the College now stands.

An. 1336. July 7. The sixth purchase was that of Rose Hall, and White Hall, lying in Kybald street, in St. John's parish, passed by Alice, the daughter of Walter Crendon, to Robert Parrington and Jo. Pokelington, and now makes the south part, or Grove of the College, formerly planted with walnut trees, but now cut down.

(1) Ibid. p. 56.

An. 1336,

An. 1336, July 21. Ludlow Hall, the seventh purchase, in St. Peter's parish, was then passed to the aforesaid Robert Patrington and John Pokelington, now included in the College.

An. 1353, May 30. The eighth purchase was that by which Roger Lodelow passes Olyfant Hall, otherwise Unicorn Hall, to Mr. Laur. Radeford: it lay in St. Mildred's, between Brasenose and Lincoln College.

An. 1353, May 30. The ninth purchase was that by which John Stillego of Hereford passed to Mr. Roger Ashwardby a tenement called Staple Hall, in St. Mildred's parish: this Hall stood the most east of the three Halls the College had together: it was also sometimes called St. Thomas's Hall.

An. 1353, the tenth purchase was that of Aula Scuti, or Sheld Hall: this, as appears by another deed relating to it, stood between Oliphant Hall on the west side, and Staple Hall on the east.

An. 1357, after March 25, the eleventh purchase was passed by John Hertwell and Alice his wife, under the name of a tenement called Stanton Hall, in St. Mary's parish, to Roger Aswordly and Laur. Radeford: This stands the next house but one to the College, and is called the Three Tun Tavern.

An. 1357, May 1, J. Bereford and Agnes his wife, passed a tenement called Hampton Hall, in St. Mildred's parish, to Roger Ashwardly and Laur. Radeford.

An. 1360, Aug. 15, John Bereford passed a tenement, afterwards called Sykle Hall, in All Hallows parish, to Mr. Wm. Wilton and Henry Hopton: These two last tenements, though in several parishes, stood next to one another, and are now part of the lesser quadrangle of Lincoln College, where their Chapel stands. Here (at least in part) ends the fifteen or sixteen Halls, and one Introitus, which Scholars rented and lived in; of which, three were bought by the University, and 13 by the Fellows of the College, before the great purchase made by Laur. Radeford, &c. in the 1360." (1)

"As to Laur. Radeford's purchase, the first true Deed I meet with (not to mention counterfeit Charters) is from Jo. de Gonewardby to Mr. John de Wormenhale and John Mahu of Whathamstede, dated after Sept. 1, 1359: These two persons afterwards pass the same lands to three Masters, viz. Laurence Radeford, William Wymundam, and Henry Hopton, dated Apr. 25, 1360. Wymundam and Hopton might pass over their right to Laur. Radeford afterwards."

(1) Ibid. p. 85.

"Laur. Radeford passes the same houses and lands to the Scholars of University Hall in Oxon June 5, 1361, under the names of 7 messuages, 8 shops, 12 acres of land, 25 of meadow, and 1*l.* 4*s.* 5*d.* quit rent, with some other gardens and granges: the worth of all which, as found in the Burfar's Roll 1381, by their rents amounted to 15*l.* odd money: The deed was for two parts in possession, the third was in reversion after the decease of Robert Mansfall and Maud his wife, relict of Jo. Goldsmith. I have put all the lands together, though devised in the deed; and must take notice that no person is appointed to be prayed for, but Robert Caldewell, for whom there was a Chaplain to be appointed at first; and also the deed gives half a mark to every Fellow yearly, and what remained was to go toward the increase of more Fellows in the Society." (1)

"But no benefit accrued to the College from this purchase; for after a long suit between Edmund Fraunceys and Idonia his wife, they were forced to buy or redeem their right with a great sum of money." (2)

"This opinion of the College having no Seal before 40 Edw. III, (an. 1366) is far out of the way; for certainly it had one before the year 1320, and the Author himself had seen and quoted a deed made to Queen's College, and sealed with the College seal, 14 Edw. III, 1340." (3)

"The first letters patent that the College had were granted in 1317, Jan. 27, 11 Edw. II: in which 'license is granted to Philip of Beverley, that he may assign one mill, five bovates and a half, and three acres of land, and two

"A like grant from Philip of Beverley with this difference, that he gives, grants and confirms to the Masters and Scholars of that Hall of the University of Oxon, who should be commorant, and studying at Oxford, or any other place in England, if it should happen that the University of Oxon should be transferred to some other place: He also appoints the Masters, Scholars and their successors, to pray for his own soul, and the souls of Robert Ingleberd his father, and Alice his mother, Mr. William Burnel, and John le Grafs, and the Lady Devorgull Balliol; and obligeth the Society to chuse and maintain two Scholars, or Masters born near Beverley, &c. and to pay Sibil, formerly the wife of Stephen of Pagula, yearly, for her life, sixty shillings; and whilst she lived he only obliged them to maintain one Scholar, and pay or exhibit to his Scholars as they do to themselves; and leaves half a mark to the Senior Master, and also to his Scholars; and the remainder to be divided amongst the rest of the Scholars or Masters. Sealed with his own seal, and the seal of the said Masters and Fellows dated 'Wednesday after the feast of the Trinity A. D. 1320.' (1)

"Betwixt King Edward the Firſt's ſurvey in 1278 or 1279, and the time it was purchaſed, there were three or more owners of it. Firſt, Andrew of Durham, who was one of the Aldermen of the City when that ſurvey was made, and from whom it bare the name of Durham Hall; afterwards it was called Selverne Hall, and at the time it was bought, which was in the year 1332, it was called Spicer's Hall, except that Selvern and Spicer ſhould prove the ſame perſon, the one derived from his name, the other from his trade; for, in the interval of the time above mentioned, Adam Feteplace, who had been many years Mayor, was become the owner of it, and it was bought of his three daughters, who were then heiresses.

Now this being but a ſingle houſe, and of no greater length forwards than two rooms on a floor, nor of greater length backward than what the preſent quadrangle contains, one can ſcarce think they removed into it, till they had purchaſed two Halls (White Hall and Roſe Hall) that lay behind it, and reached as far ſouthward as a certain ſtreet called Kybald ſtreet, now quite ſhut up and incloſed. — Theſe two Halls came together to the College by purchaſe in the year 1343, with Ludlow Hall, which lay in St. Peter's pariſh, and was not taken into the College till ſome time after; and by the taking that in, the eaſt part of the old quadrangle lay in St. Peter's, and the gate and the weſt part lay in St. Mary's." "This Society having long borne the name of 'University Scholars,' it was not possible to shake off that name on a sudden; and therefore upon their removal, I suppose, they called their new lodgings by the name their old ones were vulgarly known by; and to prove this there are several deeds or leases, in which they stile themselves (and others stiled them also) 'The Master and Scholars of the University of Oxon;' and all the difference put between their old and their new Hall was this, the one was called 'Aula Universitatis in vico Scholarum,' and the other 'Aula Universitatis in Alto Vico;' but how long this continued I cannot be certain to a day, or a year, but shall acquaint the reader about what time I find a variation; for, till the year 1631, it certainly kept its old name of 'Aula Universitatis Oxon,' as it appears by Lau. Rudeford's deed, dated that year, which conveys a considerable estate to the College (bought, at least in part, with the last remains of what was owing of William of Durham's money): From that year, and for several years after, the leases run in the name of 'The Master and Fellows of the Hall of William of Durham, commonly called Aula Universitatis.' And the first time I find 'Magna Aula Universitatis' added to the other, was in the year 1381, and after that year both the names were promiscuously used, till the title was changed by a later Charter from Q. Eliz. What I have writ hitherto is borrowed from deeds and leases; but from the year last mentioned 1381, we have most of the Bursars Rolls remaining with us, and then the stile runs thus, 'Computus, &c. of the Bursar of the College of Mr. William of Durham, commonly called Mickle University Hall, and this title continued till the 14th of Rich. II, 1390, when the stile was sometimes changed into 'Collegii Magnæ Aulæ Universitatis,' but in the 23d of Rich. II it returned to the former title of 'The College of William of Durham, &c.' and then again, after some years, to 'Micel Hall of the University,' and so mutably as the Bursars pleased; but in Q. Eliz. time, till the year 1572 it is oftner stiled the 'College of William of Durham,' than barely 'Magna Aula Universitatis,' as well in leases, as in the Bursars' accounts."

"And it is almost manifest, that the third 'Little University Hall' derived its name as a difference from the 'Great Hall' (one single House, or Hall standing betwixt them, and that was Ludlow Hall) and in an old deed belonging to that Hall, I find this Little University Hall called the tenement of John de Hasele, in the year 1315, and in the year 1343 the tenement of Michael, the son of Andrew de Pyrie; and the first time I find it in any deed called Little University Hall is in the year 1379. This Little University Hall was afterwards bought by the College in the year 1404, and became part of the Master's Lodgings; and is made part of the New Buildings, erected with the 5000l. given them by the late famous Physician Dr. Radcliffe." "Sir SIMON BENET had been formerly educated in the College, and died about the year 1635.—But his estate came not to the College before the death of his Lady, and was settled in Chancery about the beginning of the war, 1640, by a certificate from Archb. Laud, who advised, that it should be disposed of for four Fellowships, four Scholarships, and several other benefits to those of the old foundation. But some of Sir Simon's female relations, by the power of their husbands, Mr. Hambden and others, in the Long Parliament 1649, got this decree reversed, the number increased, and half the places to be so reserved to the Founder's kindred, that no other could be chosen, till after three months notice to come in, and make their claim: But before the year 1660, all the members of this new foundation were dispersed or broken up, by the failure of their tenants, &c. so that both the foundations, the new as well as the old, petitioned in Chancery to have the second settlement revoked, and the first ratified afresh; in which last decree there was a provision made for a yearly anniversary festival, in memory of their honourable benefactor, as was usual, says the decree, in other Colleges, and eight pounds a year allotted for that festival, and Simon and Jude's day appointed for the keeping of it: And this was partly done because Sir Simon borrowed his name from one of those Saints, but more especially because he himself, who annually clothed 22 persons, some in one place, some in another, ordered that they should have their cloaths given them upon Simon and Jude's day yearly." "The Statue of K. ALFRED over the Hall door was caused to be made by Dr. ROBERT PLOT, when sometime after his taking that degree, he removed from Magdalen Hall, and became a Fellow Commoner of this College. He was at the whole expense of both making and setting up this Statue over the Gate towards the street: It is not certain what year of our Lord this was done in, but the year of its removal, and what it cost, may be given, because it was at the College charge, and was done an. 1686, and cost the College in removing it 3l. 1s. 5d. For Dr. Plot being removed to his own estate in Kent, and Mr. Obad. In the year 1766, the inside of this Hall received a considerable alteration and improvement, by the removal of the fire-place from the centre of the room, which was the usual mode in our Halls; erecting a chimney on the south side; ceiling the roof; putting up a wainscot, with a screen at the lower end; and ornamenting the whole in the Gothic stile. The floor also was new paved. The expense, amounting to near 1200*l.* was defrayed by the generous contribution of the Master and Fellows, and also of many others, who were then, or had been, Members of the Society; most of whose Arms are placed on the wainscot. The chimney-piece, which is an elegant Gothic stone work, was the donation of Sir ROGER NEWDIGATE, Baronet, D. C. EDWARD LEIGH, Baron LEIGH of Stoneleigh in Warwickshire, sometime a Nobleman of this College, afterward High Steward of the University, and D. C. L. by Diploma, who died in 1786, having bequeathed to this College his large and well chosen Library of Books; the Society in 1788 begun a new Building for a Library, &c. on the north side of the inner Court, between Provost Carter and Bishop Robinson's Buildings. To the erection of which the Provost, Fellows, and many former Members have very liberally contributed. The Hon. Mrs. — LEIGH, sister and sole heiress to Lord Leigh, has also been a generous Contributor to the same purpose. The Architect is Mr. Wyatt.

This correction we owe to Bishop Kennett's PAROCHIAL ANTIQVIT. as also the rectifying of A. Wood's assertion that the advowson of Blechingdon church came into the hands of Hen. III, as an escheat by the forfeiture of Richard and William Grenevill. In the year 1228, 12-13 of Hen. III, Sir Richard de Prescote presented to the church of Blechingdon. (1)

In 1234, which was the 18-19 year of Hen. III, the same Sir Richard Prescote presented to the church of Blechingdon. (2) In 1261, the 25-26 of Edward I, Thomas de Capella was Parson of Blechingdon, and being a Clerk in Chancery was excused his attendance by a letter from the King; (3) and this same year he resigned it: whereupon Hugh Musgrave and Maud his wife presented Richard Musgrave to it, and Nicholas Trimenell and Mabil his wife also presented another person to the living; but on a trial de jure Patronatus, the latter persons withdrew their presentation. (5) In the year 1311, the 4th and 5th of Edward II, there was a trial at law for the patronage of the church of Blechingdon between the King as plaintiff, and Henry de la Wade, John son of John de Croxford, Maud de Musgrave and John de Lou, on the calends of May, and the King recovered his right of presentation; yet on the 13th of the calends of April 1317, Thomas de Musgrave presented a Clerk to the church of Blechingdon, which was then vacant. (6)

By this it clearly appears that the advowson was vested from and before the 12th and 13th of Henry III in the family of Prestecote, and continued with his descendants till the 4th and 5th of Edward II, when it came by lapse to the King, who presented for that turn, and on the decease of the Minister it fell again into the family of Musgrave, (in the 10-11 year of the same King) who presented to the Living.

If this had ever been escheated to Hen. III, it would have continued in possession full to the Crown, and Edward II would have had no need of recourse to law to present but once to the Living, because it would have been his own absolute right through the escheature: from this it is evident it never did escheat, at the time mentioned by A. Wood, neither were the Grenvilles ever possessed of the Patronage.

The following Account of the FOUNDER is taken from Gough's SEPULCHRAL MONUMENTS in Great Britain, Part I, p. 102; who quotes Burn's HISTORY of Westmoreland, Vol. I, 566—568; and MSS of E. R. Mores.

IN the Treasury of this College is a brass plate, found in the old Chapel, which Mr. Mores ascribes to ROBERT EGLESFELD.

It represents a priest in a cap and rich rochet powdered with fleurs de lis in lozenges, and faced and hemmed with a different border, and fastened on his breast with a jewel. The sleeves of his black gown are faced with fur.

This munificent man was a native of Eglesfeld, a small village in Cumberland, and Chaplain to K. Edward III, who presented him to the Rectory of Burgh in Westmoreland 1332, in the person of Adam de Eglesfeld, his proxy, and he was ordained priest at Carlisle in Lent following. This church was appropriated to the College by Pope Clement VI in 1344. Dr. Todd says he was the son of John Eglesfeld and Beatrix his wife, and he is probably the person who held the manor of Ravenswyke, 1 Edw. III; which he afterwards granted to his College to hold of the King in capite. From the inquisition taken 14 Edw. III, 1341, it should seem he, or some relation of both his names died on or about that year.

The old Liber obitalis of the College dates his death 2 cal. Jun. 1349.

Robertus Eglesfield, Cumbriensis, sacrae theologiae baccalaureus, Reginae Philippae uxoris Edwardi capellanus, rector de Burgo subtus Stanesmore, in

(1) Thomas Tanner was first a Member of this College and B. A. then Chaplain and Fellow of All Souls College, and afterward Canon of Christ Church.

Dei gloriam, Ecclesiæ bonum, et bonarum literarum propagationem Collegium hoc Regina fundavit, A. D. 1340, et anno regni Edw. III, 15. Obiit iste Robertus, A. D. 1349, 2 calend. Junii.

The first mention of his successor in the vicarage is 1369; for we have no other circumstances of his life or death but his most beneficial institution for the emolument chiefly of persons born within the counties of Westmoreland and Cumberland; which counties, above all others, were overrun with ignorance and barbarism, by the perpetual hostilities between the borders on both sides; and which has been productive of infinite advantage, not only to the said two counties, but the kingdom in general, in furnishing many able and learned men, both in church and state.

I shall not meddle any farther with the time of his death, than the proofs I shall bring to ascertain the place of his interment will allow; which, though they are not positive evidence, yet will make it appear at least highly probable that he was buried in the Chapel of his own College. They are these:

1. In the computus of Sir John de Hoton, from the 13th of Oct. 1351, to the 13th of July following, is this article:

Lib'at. p' cera et vino p' capell.	{	In p'mis p' cera 1xs. pro xvii li. et qu'rt. de q'bus xi lib. lib' abantur aule reg' p' cera exp'sa in funera- c'one Rob'ti Egilsfeld.

Notwithstanding which, some people say that he might have been buried elsewhere, as for instance, at Burgh; to which I reply, that had he been buried at Burgh, or indeed any where but here, this article would not have been placed amongst the expenses of the Chapel, but under the title of expens. forinsecæ.

2. The second argument I shall offer is a negative proof of his not being buried but at his own College; for had he been buried any where else, doubtless some of his Fellows would have been present at his funeral; and if so the expenses of their journey would appear among the expens. forinsecæ of the year; but no such expenses are mentioned.

3. There was formerly a tradition that he was buried here; and that the plate under the communion table in the old Chapel was designed for him. This Dr. Shaw has often told me.

4. All the pictures of Robert Eglesfeld are exactly like the effigy represented by this plate; they were taken from it, as Dr. Shaw told me.

The Life of WILLIAM of WAYNFLETE was written in Latin by John Budden, D. C. L. then Moral Philosophy Reader in this College, of whom see more among the King's Professors of Civil Law, and the Principals of New Inn Hall. He printed it at Oxford in 1602, 4to. and dedicated it to Nicholas Bond, D. D. then President. It was reprinted in 1681 in Bates's Vitæ selectorum aliquot virorum, &c. 4to. In the Archives of this College Library there is preserved a MS (No. 227) entitled 'Wainflet's Memoriall, or a true Historiographicall Narration of the Life, and Actes, and Death of that famous Prelate W. of Wainflet, B. of Winchester,' &c. a Poem, written by Peter Heylin in his younger years (first a Demy, afterward Fellow of this College, and D. D.) and dedicated 'to the right worshipful and reverend Mr. Dr. Langton, the most worthy President of Magdalen Colledge.' It has no date; but as it mentions the death of Q. Anne, and yet speaks of K. James as still on the throne, it must have been written between 1619 and 1625. Heylin was born Nov. 29, 1599.

(50)—add The celebrated Stamford Antiquary, Francis Peck, tells a story of Dr. Humphrey out of a LIFE of Robert Earl of Leicester, 8vo. 1727, to this effect: Queen Elizabeth coming to Oxford in the year 1566, was received at Wolvercote by the Chancellor, Vicechancellor, certain Heads of Houses, and others of the University, who came out to meet her; and one of them having made a speech, 'she then held out her hand to the Orator and Doctors; and as Dr. H. drew near to kiss it, "Mr. Doctor," says the Queen smiling, "that loose gown becomes you mighty well. I wonder your notions should be so narrow." This Humphreys, it seems, was at the head of the Puritan party, and had opposed the Ecclesiastical habits with great warmth.' (DESID. CURIOSA, lib. VII, N. 18: and Q. Eliz. PROGRESSES collected by Nichols.) A copy of Latin Verses by Humphrey is prefixed to the Martyrology of John Fox, who in 1545 had resigned his Fellowship of this College, 'merely, as 'twas thought to prevent expulsion,' says A. Wood. Humphrey however was a learned man, was author of a Life of Bishop Jewell, and several other works. Towards the end of his life he was likewise more conformable. P. 329, N. (72*)—add The Organ was formerly placed against the south wall, near the Altar. Oliver Cromwell was fond of Music, and what may seem surprising, was particularly fond of the music of an Organ: as appears from the following anecdote. In the Grand Rebellion, when the Organ at Magdalen College in Oxford, among others, was taken down, Cromwell ordered it to be conveyed to Hampton Court, where it was placed in the great Gallery; and one of Cromwell's favourite amusements was to be entertained with this Instrument at leisure hours. It continued there till the Restoration, when it was returned to the original owners, and was the same that remained in the Choir of the College till within these 20 years. (Warton's Obs. on Spenser, 8vo. 1762, Vol. II, Note on p. 326.) Sir John Hawkins likewise cites this Note in his History of Music. But Mr. Warton produces no authority for this anecdote. This Organ is now in the Church of Tewkesbury, Gloucestershire.

P. 350, N. (87)—add It seems as if these Statues were at first coloured, the traces of paint being discernible on many of them. But the 71st page of Wake's REX PLATONICUS (12°, 5th ed. 1635) puts the matter beyond a doubt. They are there said to be 'vivis coloribus—expressæ.' The figure of Moses is mentioned as being habited 'togâ cæruleâ:' and 'Medicus purpuratus' occurs in a few lines after. The same expressions are to be met with in Mr. Reeks's Œdipus Magdalenensis, Explicatio viz. Imaginum, &c. MS in the Archives of the College Library, written when Dr. Henry Clerk was President, between 1671 and 1687. These figures are executed in a style superior to most works of sculpture of their age; and it is highly probable that they were done from designs by Holbein. It is certain that there is one figure, professedly by Holbein, in the Moriæ Encomium of Erasmus, which is precisely the same in point of attitude and drapery with that which is here supposed to represent a Physician. As for Mr. Reeks's Explication, the substance of which is printed (but not quite accurately) in the Oxford Guide, from the MS above cited; though it may in the main be right, yet in some instances perhaps it is not so. Particularly, 'the Dog, the Dragon, and the Deer,' on the East side, are made to signify 'Flattery, Envy, and Timidity;' but it seems more probable that these three Figures, and perhaps a few of the others, were placed here on an Heraldic account. The collared Greyhound (for the Dog is of that species) is known to have been borne as a Supporter by K. Henry VII, and by K. Henry VIII, in the beginning of his reign; the Dragon was constantly one of the Supporters, and the favourite badge of the Tudor branch, then on the Throne; and the Antelope was that of the House of Lancaster, and particularly of K. Henry VI, the FOUNDER's especial Patron. Now that the beast which Mr. R. calls a Deer is in reality no other than the Antelope of the Herald's, is very evident from the form of its head and horns, and especially from the gilt Coronet with which it is gorged, and the Chain which is reflexed over its back: which surely are no very characteristic emblems of timidity, and which as certainly are the Decorations of the Royal Antelope.

P. 351, l. 3—add In much the same strain of just Panegyric are the encomiums on this College in Sir Isaac Wake's REX PLATONICUS.

— l. 20—add Mr. Byres of Rome saw the picture in June 1787, and pronounced it to be by the hand of Ludovico Caracci. Most of the Cognoscenti have likewise thought that it came from the Bolognese School. The little figures in the back-ground have puzzled them all. These figures have certainly the appearance of coming from another hand: and it is remarkable that they very nearly resemble some in Guido's Martyrdom of St. Andrew, a famous picture which he painted at Rome in competition with Domenichino. This perhaps is what has induced several judges to suppose the picture a work of that Master. Guido was a pupil of Ludovico.

The whole of the Antechapel a few years since was adorned with an elegant new Pulpit, Lecturer's Seat, and other seats, and also a new pavement.

P. 351, l. 26—add The two new ones were done by William Price, jun. who died in 1765, 'whose colours (saith Walpole) are fine, whose drawing good, and whose taste in Ornaments and Mosaic is far superior to any of his predecessors, is equal to the antique, to the good Italian Masters, and only surpassed by his own singular modesty.' Price also repaired some of the windows at New College. (ANECD. OF PAINTING, Vol. II, 4to. p. 18; 8vo, p. 28.)

— add Early in the morning of Feb. 25, 1786, two persons, by means of false keys, made their way into this College Chapel, and stole from the Altar a large silver offertory plate (with an Inscription on it) and two pair of tall massy Candlesticks. One pair was of silver gilt, and was purchased many years ago by the College. The others were the gift of Sir Bryan Broughton Delves, Baronet, M. A. and Fellow Commoner; and were of French plate, of a very elegant form, after an antique, highly wrought and double gilt, with Sir Bryan's Arms, and a short Inscription on them. They cost 70 Guineas.

Arms—Quarterly; first and fourth, Arg. two Bars Gules; on a Canton of the second a Cross of the first: Second and third, Gules, a Chevron Arg. fretty Or, between three Delves Sab. With the Arms of Ulster.

One of the persons concerned in the robbery, being apprehended on suspicion, afterwards turned evidence; in consequence of which his accomplice and two accessories were taken up, tried, and condemned. The two accessories were transported, and the other executed according to his sentence.

A handsome pair of Candlesticks has since been given by the President. They bear this Inscription:

'D. D. G. HORNE, Præses, necnon Decan. Cantuar. 1787.'

The whole of the Antechapel a few years since was adorned with an elegant new Pulpit, and other parts, and also a new pavement. The two new windows (which were done by William Price, Junr. who died in 1765, whose colours (said Walpole) are fine, whole drawing good, and which is equal to the antique to the good Italian Masters, and only surpassed by his own singular modernity. Price also repaired some of the windows of the new College.

- The late Principal YARBOROUGH's Heirs made a present to the Society of his large collection of books, the classical part of which is peculiarly curious and valuable, as containing numberless MS notes by the learned Jos. Wasse, B. D. of Queen's Coll. Cambridge; whom Dr. Yarborough succeeded in the Rectory of Aynhoe. In consequence of this donation it was judged necessary to alter and new model the Library. Mr. Wyatt furnished the plan; for the executing of which Dr. BARKER, Principal, gave in his life time the sum of 300*l*. On account of these projected improvements the Pictures were removed into the lower room of the Tower, where they now are, 1789.

The site of the College, how narrow soever the compass may seem to be, did heretofore contain no less than five several Halls, and as many Gardens :

1	Corner Hall and Garden	1
2	Nunne Hall
3	Nevill's Inn and Garden	2
4	Bekes Inn and Garden	3
5	Urban Hall and Garden	4
	Bachelors Garden	5

Corner Hall stood in the North west Corner, near Canterbury College, where is now the Butler's Chamber, and adjoining Lodgings.

Nunne Hall, called also Leaden Porch, stood on the south of that; and belonged to the Nunns of Godstow, of whom the FOUNDER bought it.

Nevill's Inn stood on the south of Nunne Hall, and the north of Beke's Inn, having a Garden lying on the east of all three.

Beke's Inn stood on the south of Nevill's Inn, and the north of Bachelors Garden.

Bachelors Garden, belonging to Merton College, lay on the south of these, extending by the Town wall from Merton on the east, to the street against St. Frideswyde's Church on the west.

Urban Hall stood in the North east, between Merton, and Corner Hall joining to the street against Oriel. (Fulm. MS in Coll. Library.)

Dr. TURNER, President, was a single man, and remarkable for his munificence and charity in his life time: and by his will left the bulk of his fortunes, which were very considerable, to public and charitable uses; for besides 4000*l.* in legacies to his relations and friends, he gave or left to his College 6000*l.* for improving the buildings, and other purposes;—to the Dean and Chapter of Ely 1000*l.* for augmenting the singing mens' stipends; and 100*l.* the interest whereof to be expended in putting out Children of the Town of Ely apprentices, at the nomination of his successors in his Preb. of that Church; and the remainder of his effects, which amounted to 20,000*l.*, his executors were directed to lay out in estates, and settle them on the Governors of the Charity for the relief of poor widows and Children of Clergymen. His executors accordingly purchased the Manor of Stow (Stow Nine Churches) in Northamptonshire, and other estates there, and at West Wrating in Cambridgeshire, amounting to above 1000*l.* a year, and settled them, A. A. Wood gives the following account of the Bells at Osney Abbey, &c. in his MS Collections for the History of the City of Oxford, in the Ashm. Museum, fol. 219, a. "At the west end of the Church was situated the Campanile or Tower, which enduring the brunt stood firm and whole within these 17 years (till after 1644): It contained a large and melodious ring of Bells, the best as was thought in England, as John Major, a Scottish Historian, (De Gestis Scotorum, lib. iii. cap. 1.) reporteth in these words: 'Campanis Cænobii de Osneya nullæ in Anglia meliores putantur.' At the first foundation there were but three besides the Saints and Litany Bells, but by Abbot Leech encreased to the number of seven (ex MS Anonimi Ousney de vitis Abbatum ejusdem penes ep'um Oxon): which, as I find out of an old Rationale (inter vet: Chart: Ousney) sometime belonging to the Church, and which speaks of the office of every bell in ringing on several Festivals and tolling of knells, were christned and called by the names of Hauteclere, Douce, Clement, Austyn, Marie, Gabriel, and John: All which for the most part toward the suppression (being before broken and recast) had gotten new names, which which by tradition we have thus—Mary and Jesus, Meribus and Lucas, New bell and Thomas, Conger and Goldeston: which Thomas, now commonly called Great Tom of Christ Church, had this inscription not long since remaining upon it: ‘In Thomæ laude resono Bim Bom sine fraude.’ It being one of the biggest of their bells, was accounted six feet in its diameter, which is 18 feet in compass, and therefore reputed to be as big as Edward Bell at Westminster, or Dunstan Bell at Canterbury, spoken of by Bishop Godwin—(Com. de Præsul. Angl. in Cant: et in Vita H. Chichele.) Dr. Tresham, it seems, baptized this bell when ’twas transported to Christ Church (of which place he was Canon) with the name of Mary, for joy (as Dr. Humphreys saith—Vita Juelli, part. iii. f. 81) of Q. Mary’s reign; and being about that time Vicechancellor of the University, and hearing it accidentally ring when learned Juell was with him about other business, burst out into these words—‘O bellam et suavem harmoniam, O pulchram Mariam, ut sonat musice, ut tinuit melodice, ut placet auribus mirifice’—thus he—and so much was the old man delighted with the noise of it, that he promised the Students (Fox in Q. Mary, f. 1648) if they would come to mass, which was then restored in Q. Mary’s days, to get the Lady bell at Bampton, of which place he was Vicar, and others added to it, and make it the sweetest ring of bells in England.”

The following explanation of the last line has been communicated by Mr. WARTON.

Before the Reformation, it was customary for our Bishops to constitute Suffragan Bishops, who had in many things full episcopal powers: these had their Titles from places in partibus Infidelium, where they could not, and where it never was intended, they should exercise authority. Thus Ep'us Lidenfis was from a place under the Patriarch of Jerusalem. Of this Patriarchate, see the GEOGRAPHIA SACRA of Carolus a Sancto Paulo, with L. Holstein's Notes, Amstel. 1703, p. 299. ‘Nec tamen, id, &c.’ It had ‘tres Sedes [Sees] subjectas, nimirum, Bethleemitanam, Ebronensem, et Lyddensem.’ Ibid. p. 302. Lydda was sometimes called Diospolis, ‘quæ Lydda. Ælius episcopus Lyddenfis interfuit Consilio Nicæno primo.’ Ibid. p. 305. See also ibid. ad calc. Parergon. p. 59. ‘Patriarchatus Hierosolymitanus habet sub se hos Metropolos infra annotatos; et hos Suffraganeos, quorum primus est Lydda, &c.’ Again, this Patriarch has ‘hos Suffraganeos, Ebronensem, Lidensem, &c.’ Ibid. p. 72. And here we have the spelling LIDENSIS, as on this Foundation stone.

The Ep'us Lidenfis is John Holte, Suffragan, under that title, to the Bishop of London. He was successor to T. Bele, who was living about 1520. A. Wood says, ‘In that titular See succeeded one John Holt, but whether educated in this University I cannot tell. He lived mostly in the Town of Bury

Bury St. Edmund in Suffolk; where dying about the 12th of Aug. 1540, was buried in the Church of our blessed Lady S. Mary there, in our Lady's Isle near to the head of John Holt, Gent.' ATH. OXON. I. 666. He was employed on this occasion, as living at no great distance from Ipswich. He is thus mentioned in Henr. Wharton's MS List of English Suffragan Bishops, in Lambeth Library: 'Johannes Holte, Ep'us Lyddensis, obiit 1540.'

In the Abbey Church of Dorchester near Oxford, is an Inscription for one of the Priors, with the same title, and the spelling the same: but having been published incorrectly, and now going fast to decay, the following transcript is here given: It is round the verge of a large white grave-stone, on which is the figure of a Bishop, in the middle of the Chancel:

'Hic jacet d'us Rogerus quo'dam p'or p'oratus de Rauton in com. Stafordie, postea abbas mon. de Dorchester lincol. dioces. necnon ep'us lidensis cujus anime propicietur d. Amen.'

Brown Willis says this Prior Roger was Suffragan to the Bishop of Salisbury, and died in 1518. HIST. of Abbies, Vol. II, p. 176.

Our Author no doubt reserved his recital of the ancient sepulchral Monuments in this Church for his intended History of the City of Oxford; but having left nothing relating to them in his MS Collections for that History, which are deposited in his Study at the Ashmolean Museum, the following account of them, and also of the Church, is chiefly taken from Willis's SURVEY of this Cathedral.

The Church is built in the shape of a Cross, with a Spire Steeple in the middle. The Nave and cross Ailes were raftered under in brackets and panels like some of our best wrought parochial churches; and the Choir and Ailes on each side all vaulted or arched with stone, by the Cardinal before-mentioned: which stone work was brought from Osney Abbey. The length from east to west is only 154 feet, though before the Cardinal pulled down three pillars or arches of the west part, it was 50 feet longer. The length of the cross Aile from north to south, excluding the old Clock house is 102 feet, and including it is about 120. Height of the Roof, in the western part, is 41 feet and a half; and in the Choir part 37 feet and a half. Breadth of the Nave and side Ailes 54 feet; and height of the present Steeple 144 feet. The length of the Choir 80 feet.

The Builders of this Church were chiefly the Priors, who began it in K. Henry the first's reign. The Latin Chapel, dedicated no doubt to the Virgin Mary, was built about the end of K. Henry the third's reign; as the Chapter House seems to have been; and which opens into the east Cloister.

To

To whom the old Gravestones belonged I cannot pretend to ascertain; though I am satisfied, five or six of them that have crosses cut on them, were in memory of ancient Priors, or religious persons of this Convent, and that others were laid over especial benefactors.

I have met with an old will of CHRISTIAN, daughter of Ralph Paddy, wife of Jordan Rufus, a benefactress of some lands 1242, who bequeathed her body to be interred here; as did EDMUND de LUDLOW, Rector of Beckley, temp. Edw. III, whose name is yet visible on one of the gravestones. I also find that NICHOLAS CARENT, Dean of Wells, willed anno 1467 his sepulture here; as did likewise HENRY NOERS and JULIAN his wife, daughter of Henry Caldre, bequeath their demesnes at Churchill to this Convent, together with their bodies to be here interred. I have also seen that JOHN PEGGIE appointed to be buried in St. Mary's Chapel in this Priory Church: And in an account of persons interred here (besides the aforesaid) I find it mentioned, that WILLIAM ASTELL, Burgefs of Oxford, BAWDINUS de PARTES and his wife, and WILLIAM de STRATFORD, who with the consent of Benet or Benedicta his wife, gave Elsfeld to this Convent temp. Edv. I; and also JOHN and RICHARD HAMOND, and JOHN de ST. FRIDESWYDE's, who lived temp. Edv. III, were all of them buried here. Wherefore that many of the eighteen old Gravestones now lying in that part of the Church called the Dean and Canons' Ailes (removed thither several of them from other parts of the Church) belonged to them I make no question; especially as there are on some of them the very impressions of men and women, and others of single men; the largest of which, being seemingly of an Ecclesiastic, I should judge to have belonged to Dean CARENT.

As to the ancient raised Monuments or Tombs before Queen Elizabeth's time, these being only five, I shall thus account for them.

The first placed under the great window in the north cross Aile, which had on it the effigies of a person in brass praying, and an inscription at bottom torn off, was, as I am not only satisfied from the fashion of it, made in King Henry the seventh's time, but almost assured that it was erected in memory of JAMES SOUCH or ZOUCHE, who died 1503. For in the Prerog. Office, London, I have met with a will dated Oct. 16, 1503, and proved Febr. 12 following of the said Souch; who appoints to be buried under this very window, and a Tomb to be erected over him in the midst of the said window, and for licence to do so bequeaths 30l. to the Convent to the vaulting or adorning this part of the Church, and 40s. to the Prior for his grave, and as much to the Convent and University to pray for him. (1)

(1) This Tomb has an inkhorn and pen-case in compartments at the front and sides, and nothing else remaining to ascertain it. Stowe, in his Hist. of London, p. 48, speaking of the proceedings of the insurgents under Wat Tyler in the reign of King Richard II, says, 'They took in hand to behead all men of law, as well apprentices as utter barristers and old justices, with all the jurors of the country whom they might get into their hands. They spared none whom they thought to be learned, especially if they found any to have a pen and inkhorne about him: they pulled off his hood, and all with one voyce crying, Hale him out, and cut off his head.'

The other four ancient Tombs are all between the respective arches, dividing the Divinity or Latin Chapel from the middle north Aile.

The lowest of these is of a man in armour, and is reported to belong to Sir HENRY de BATHE, a Justice of the King's Bench; Justiciary of England, temp. Hen. III, 1238, who died 1261. It contains his effigies lying on his tomb, with whiskers, gorget of mail, and helmet pointed, terminating in a nob. (1)

Under his head a Bull's head Gul. and at his feet a Hound couchant Argent, collared: upon his breast 3 Garbs Or. With these Arms about the Monument:

At each end—Arg. a Chevron Sab. between two Greyhounds rampant, combatant, in Chief, and one rampant in Base of the last: Impaling; Azure, a Fess Argent between three Garbs Or. (2)	_____

	Lucie.

The next above him is the effigies of an Ecclesiastic lying on a Tomb, supposed to be one of the Priors of St. Frideswyde's, and was probably in memory of Prior Philip, who died about 1190, or Guymond the first Prior, by whose care this Convent was re-established an. 1111, and the present Church began to be edified. He died about 1149.

At his feet is a Lion, but neither Inscription or Arms. (3)

(1) How could any one conceive the effigy of a man in armour to have been intended for Sir Henry de Bathe, a Justiciary of England. Surely this is the first instance of a Judge being laid in armour on a Tomb. If he had been habited similar to Sir John de Stonare, (Chief Justice of the King's Bench 1330—ob. 1355) whose figure is on a table tomb in the church of Dorchester, Oxfordshire, there might have been room for such a conjecture; if the Arms had not proved otherwise: but in this case neither Armour or Arms will admit the report to be true.

(2) This Impaling is still to be seen in one of the windows adjoining: see p. 465.

(3) This Tomb is generally ascribed to PHILIP, third Prior of St. Frideswyde's; who finished the present Church, erected the beautiful Shrine of the Patroness still remaining, two arches above him, into which he translated her remains 1180, and wrote an account

The next contains the effigies of the Lady ELIZABETH MONTACUTE, sometime wife to William Baron Montacute, son and heir of Simon de Montacute, ancestor of the Montacutes earls of Salisbury, and high in favour with Edw. II. (1). She afterwards was married to Thomas Lord Furnival, and was daughter of Sir Peter de Montfort of Beldefert Castle in Warwickshire. She died and was buried here in 1353 (27 Edw. III) having founded in this Priory Church of St. Frideswyde a Chantry for two regular priests, to pray for her soul, her two husbands, and other relations' souls. It was assigned to two secular priests by the Bishop of Lincoln, 1380, (PAT. RIC. II, P. 3, m. 23 :) who were to celebrate near St. Frideswyde's Shrine in the Chapel of the Holy Virgin. For its endowment she gave Stockwell meadow, now belonging to this College, that is, about one half of Christ Church meadow, parted from the northern half, or Frideswyde's meadow, by what was called Sheerlake: (2) (PAT. 19 Edw. III. REGISTR. Priorat. S. Fridesw. MS. f. 293, 294, 295.) On the Tomb lies her statue set in marble with two angels supporting her head, and at her feet a hound couchant. The slab and figure lie a good way back from the ledge of the altar tomb, on whose south front are figures in pairs, and between them shields on which are these Arms:

Argent, three Lozenges in Fefs Gules.

Montacute.

These Arms occur three times.

In the middle are two arches siding a larger containing one figure, and on the spandrils the above Arms and also the following:

Bendy of ten Or and Azure.

Montfort.

These Arms occur twice.

In a quatrefoil at the head, the Virgin and Child between an Angel and an Eagle (the symbols of Matthew and John) with scrolls, and the same Arms over each. At the feet a figure in long hair, and a mantle, between a Lion account of her life and miracles. He died before 1225, but in what year is uncertain. Bishop Tanner and A. Wood (MS. 49 —) make him flourish 1180; Bp Kennet (PAROCH. ANTIQ. p. 144) and A. Wood (ANNALS, an. 1180) 1189. In this diversity of opinions we may suppose the Monument to have been erected to one or other of these Priors in a late period, to which Mr. Lethieullier assigns it, whose drawing is copied in Gough's MON. INSCRIPT. p. 36.

(1) By William, Baron Montacute, who died 13 Edw. III, she had four sons and six daughters; William, earl of Salisbury, Simon Bp of Ely, John and Edward. Of the daughters, Maud and Isabel were successive Abbesses of Barking, Essex. Dugdale, (BAR. I, 644) gives her only one son, William, created earl of Salisbury, 2 Edw. III, and buried in the Whitefriars, London, 17 Edw. III. Gough's MON. INSCRIPT. p. 105.

(2) These two meadows are surrounded by an agreeable walk, lately much improved by plantations judiciously disposed. They are also bounded on the east by the Cherwell, on the south by the river Isis, on the west by a branch of the same river, and on the north by the White Walk, which was made in the beginning of the year 1717, and is a terrace upwards of two furlongs in length and fifty feet wide, shaded on each side by lofty elms.

and

and Bull (the symbols of Mark and Luke) with scrolls, on the latter of which can just be distinguished Lucas — —: the Arms here are gone. Her head dress is of a reticulated pattern, and her sleeves embroidered with Roses and Fleurs de lis alternately in rondeaux.

This Lady MONTACUTE was also a Benefactress to building the Cloisters of this Monastery, and a shield of her Arms, the same that appear on her Tomb, are yet to be seen, among the ramifications of the eastern extremity, on the vaulting of the eastern pane to the west.

The uppermost or last is the Shrine of St. FRIDESWYDE. This is a neat and elegant structure erected over a Tomb, which had on it the effigies of a man and woman in brass, which are torn off, said to be in memory of Didane and Saffride, the said St. Frideswyde's parents.

About the year 730, Didane, a petty king in these parts, is said to have founded a Nunnery here to the honour of St. Mary and All Saints, which consisted of twelve religious Virgins of noble birth, under the government of his own daughter Frideswyde, who being buried here, and afterwards canonized for a Saint, this Monastery in process of time was dedicated to her memory, and called almost always by her name. (In some few of the old Charters temp. Hen. I, it is called 'the Church of the holy Trinity in Oxford,' as Brian Twyne, D-C° p. 115, ex Registro S. Fridiswidæ.) But the Nuns having been dispersed by the Danish wars, this Church came into the possession of secular Canons, and was burnt to the ground A. D. 1004: afterwards it was rebuilt, and better endowed for them by King Ethelred. A certain King, before the Norman conquest, is said to have expelled these Canons, and to have given this Monastery to the Monks of Abbendon, (Capgrave in vitâ S. Fridiswidæ) for some few years, and then to have restored the Canons. This may perhaps account for that in Leland's COLLECT. Vol. III, p. 72, out of the Rochester Chronicle, viz. 'A. D. 1049, restitutio Canonorum S. Fridiswidæ.'

St. Frydeswyde died Oct. 19, 740, as Cressy tells us; on which day here was a celebrated fair kept before the gates of this College.

Her Shrine was at first placed in a Chapel on the south side, where it continued for some ages almost forgotten, and defaced by fire and age: but in 1180 (though another says in 1179—Fox's ACTS and MON. Lib. IV, Vol. I, p. 299) it was with great pomp and solemnity in the presence of the King and many of the Nobility translated hither, where, according to the pretences of those times, it worked many miracles. In 1289 this old Shrine being again almost worn out, a new one was prepared, in which her bones were laid by William (De la Corner) Bishop of Sarum, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, &c. And being adored till the dissolution of the religious Houses, it was then, 30 Hen. VIII, amongst others taken down, and all the offerings were conveyed into the King's Treasury; so that the bones left behind were only feigned, which laid there till the beginning of Q. Elizabeth: for we read (Ibid. Vol. II; and Hist. de exhumatione Katherinæ nuper uxoris Petri Martyris, Martyris, by James Calfhill, D. D. 1562, 8°. that Peter Martyr's wife, who was burned here 1552, was taken up at the command of the Visitors (1556) and buried in a dunghill, she being then esteemed an heretic: but when Q. Elizabeth came to the crown she was taken up again, and her bones so mixed with St. Frideswyde's, and both buried together, that if it should happen she should hereafter be taken up they should not distinguish her bones from St. Frideswyde's: upon which this epitaph was laid:

'Hic requiescit religio cum superstitione.'

A. Wood was told in 1661, by Barten Holyday, D. D. Archd. of Oxford, that this Monument stood on the north side of the Choir, in the middle between two pillars, where the singing men sit: That it was surrounded with iron rails, with her effigies on it, in the manner of a Votarefs, and her head supported by two Angels, &c. That in Dean Duppa's time it was taken away, and in the removing was opened, where they saw a perfect effigies, with many ribbons about it, as also bay leaves and other things. He said afterwards, that the monument so removed was one of those standing in the Divinity Chapel. If so, it cannot be St. Frideswyde's, but Lady Montacute's; for of those that stand, there is not any with the effigies of a woman, but the said Lady's. Probably St. Frideswyde's Monument stood on the north side of the Choir at the upper end, where is some sign of an arch, &c. (1)

In this College there are five Portraits of him, all of the same dimensions, dress and attitude. A sixth, a most high-finished old portrait, was lately given by the College to the Picture Gallery at Oxford, instead of another now in the Library. One of these six, and the oldest, came to the College 1596—Ex Comp. Anni. Another is mentioned as hanging in the Chapel 1634—Ex Comp. Anni. One of all these which is now in the Hall, was painted by Francis Potter, a curious Mechanic and Mathematician, and a Member of the College, about 1637. Another, mentioned above, was painted in 1665, at the expense of the College, for the Picture Gallery. This is now in the College Library. Another lately purchased, a copy of Holbein, the painter unknown, is in the Bursary. There is a seventh at Tyttenhanger in Hertfordshire. They are all supposed to be copies from a valuable picture by Hans Holbein, in the possession of the Earl of Guildford at Wroxton. It is not, however, quite improbable that Holbein might have painted some of the supposed copies.—Sir Thomas Pope gave to Hans Holbein, for his picture, in the chamber within the gallery gate-house at Whitehall, designed by Hans Holbein, and lately demolished. Hans Holbein painted many of his pictures in this chamber, which was used by King Henry the eighth as a study or library.' (Warton's LIFE of Sir T. Pope, 2d edit. 8vo. p. 164, N. m.)

In the Burfary of this College is an old Portrait of Dame ELIZABETH POWLETT, relict of Sir T. POPE, FOUNDER, and afterward wife to Sir Hugh Powlett, Knight of the Garter, &c. painted, as I judge from the drapery and the age of the countenance, about the middle of Q. Elizabeth's reign; by which she appears to be handsome. This picture was in the College at least before 1613. It is mentioned in Comp. Burf. Coll. 1612-13. I have been told that this picture was painted by Sir Antonio More, portrait and history painter to Philip and Mary. Several of his pictures were in the collection of K. Charles the first, and at Sir Philip Sydenham's at Brympton in Somersetshire, a family nearly related to Lady Powlett. More had one hundred ducats for his common portraits. He died in 1575. I rather think this picture is a copy of an original by More.' (Ibid. p. 210, N. f.)

In the Burfary also are half length Portraits of RALPH KETTELL, D. D. President, in a brown furred gown, and of RALPH BATHURST, D. M. President; and also Dean of Wells.

In the centre of the Hall is a brass Column and Pedestal with this Inscription round it:

RICARDUS BECKFORD PROMUS D. D.

FIDELIS IN PAUCIS.

It has the FOUNDER's Crest on it—'Two Dragons' heddes indorsant, rasyd, a Crownett abowt their Necks, langued, counterchaunged, set on a Wreathe Gold and Vert; the Mantlets Gueules doubled silver butoned Gold.'

(1) The following extract from Fulman’s MS Collections in Corpus Christi College Library, is supposed to contain some anecdotes relating to this aged woman.

‘ Mother George—Oxford—Alice, daughter of Hugh Guies and Brigid Watkins his wife, born at Droitwich in Worc. upon All Saints day, being thursday—which must be 1571—Sixteen years old and an half at Tilbury Camp 1588—At thirty she married Thomas George at Magd. Parish Church in Oxford—By him had ten sons and five daughters—among the rest John George living in Oct. 1680, aged 76—at which time she reckoned 39 Great Grand children.’ Vol. XIV, f. 122.
Also in A. Wood’s Life, written by himself, and published in 8°. 1772, at Oxford, the Editor gives this Note:

‘ Mother George was a very ancient Dame, living in Black Boy Lane, which leads from the north end of St. Giles’s to Rats and Mice Hill: The perfect use of all her faculties at the age of 120 years, occasioned a great resort of company to her house. It was her custom to thread a very fine needle, without the help of spectacles, and to present it to her guests, who, in return, gave her some gratuity towards her support. In the latter end of her life, she removed into St. Peter’s in the Bailey, and died there by an accidental fall which injured her back.’

THOMAS de CANTELUPE was CHANCELLOR when Adam Feteplace was Mayor, Joh. Colefull, Ric. fil. Nich. Prepos: and till I find out that year when they were Officers, I cannot assign another year for the Chancellorship of Tho. de Cantelupe—O. V. 43—that charter was written before 1263. I believe that he was Chancellor part of the year 1267, because in his life 'tis said he had liked to be killed in a fray between the Australes and Boreales.

Pope Clem. V, hearing by rumours from the Dean and Chapter of Hereford, and by the Lett. pat. of K. Edw. —, the Archb. of York, 15 Bishops, 11 Earls, and many Lords and Nobles, of the holiness of Th. de Cantelupo Bp of Hereford, in order to have him canonized, the Pope orders them to enquire publicly in every one of their dioceses concerning his life, an. 1307. So in REG. H. Woodlock, ep. Winton.

This anecdote of Dr. HUMPHREY is also recorded by A. Wood in the first part of this HIST. and ANTIQ. or ANNALS: see the year CIODLXVI—'The Qu. said, "Dr. H. methinks this gown and habit becomes you very well, and I marvayle that you are so straight laced in this point—but I come not now to chide."—The Qu. reflected upon Dr. H. for his preciseness.'

P. 269, l. 1—read P. 317, on John Wilkinson note—In 1649, &c.

Fuller in his Church History, B. ix, p. 234, has related the same anecdote, but with some mistakes, which are corrected by Heylin, in his Examen Historicum, p. 268. Heylin calls the Coins Double Pistolets, and says they were 'all French pieces.'

P. 269, after l. 9—add P. 318 on Thomas Goodwyn note—

Goodwyn was doubtless the Independent Minister and Head of a College, of whom a curious and characteristic anecdote is related in No. 494 of the Spectator, one of Addison's Papers, who was Fellow of the College. The long Gallery mentioned in that account was taken down in 1770 for the improvement of the President's Lodgings. It was usually called the Election Chamber. In the Oxford Almanack for 1730, is an outside view of it. It is known by the two doors in front, a window with three lights, and as many brackets underneath.—Goodwyn attended Cromwell, his friend and patron, on his death bed, and was very confident that he would not die, from a supposed Revelation communicated to him in a prayer, but a few minutes before his death. When he found himself mistaken, he exclaimed, in a subsequent address to God, 'Thou has deceived us, and we were deceived!' (Burnet's HIST. of his own Times, B. I.)

By Stat. cap. 47—the FOUNDER reserves ‘Cameram angularem superiorem versus Orientem et Boream, et aliam cameram sibi contiguam ex parte Occidentali, infra Quadratum, pro filiis Dominorum.’ This last appears to be the room where it is said Prince HENRY kept his Court. The Chimney is richly ornamented with much carving in the style of those times, and two large Escutcheons, one of the Royal Arms (Label omitted) the other those of the College. The wainscot appears from its irregularity to have had some removals: probably the apartment was enlarged for the accommodation of his Highness, and afterwards contracted again. The wainscot of all the upper rooms on the north side of the Quadrangle is much more adorned with carved work than that of any room on the east side. Probably these were occupied by the Prince’s attendants.

P. 272, at the bottom—add P. 350, N. 86—add

There is a tradition that King HENRY VII was a Benefactor to the building of the Tower, and that he is commemorated on that account. The circumstance of singing on this Tower on the day of that King’s Commemoration seems to confirm the tradition. Besides, there does not appear to be any other reason for celebrating his memory.
